Sweeping Medical Campaign Under Way To Check Disease Epidemics in Russia; A.R.A. Feeding of Children Continues

The inoculation of more than 10,000,000 Russian children and adults against cholera, typhoid and small-pox by the American Relief Administration—a step made necessary by disease epidemics following in the wake of famine—is one phase of the sweeping medical "clean-up" campaign that has been launched by the Russian unit of this relief organization. The young women pictured above are employed in the Petrograd offices of the A. R. A. and were among the first to receive the treatment. Relief officials state that while the famine has been conquered the aftermath, bringing as it does pestilence to the weakened and undernourished, must be guarded against if those millions that have been rescued from starvation are to be saved from disease. To this end the medical division of the A. R. A. is now distributing nearly $8,000,000 worth of American Red Cross and Army medical stores to hospitals, clinics, dispensaries and orphanages throughout Russia. Sanitary trains loaded with such necessities as drugs, medicines, disinfectants, surgical instruments, soap, towels, sheets and blankets make regular trips into the interior. Twenty-four American physicians are directing the entire operation with the help of thousands of Russia's most able medical men.

In addition to precautionary and preventative measures against disease which even include the filtering and chlorinating of water supplies in larger cities and rehabilitation of unused buildings so as to insure adequate housing facilities for the great mass of refugees, the American Relief Administration, having closed its famine program of feeding 10,500,000 persons a day, has undertaken the feeding of 1,250,000 children through the coming winter. At least 1,000,000 adults are likely to be seriously affected from the after-effects of famine; and the A. R. A., through the now world famous Food Remittance system, is receiving gifts for general relief or designated beneficiaries at 42 Broadway, New York headquarters.

AID TO FARMERS IS PLEDGED BY HARDING

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Predicting a "new era of activity and prosperity" for the United States, President Harding promised the nation's farmers that they would be among the first, in that new era, to get "the substantial recognition" which they must have. The president's promise, coupled with a statement that the Harding administration has already done much for the farmer in helping restore prices and markets, was read to a farmers' gathering in Washington court house, Ohio, this afternoon by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

OLYMPIC

The laying hens should eat about equal parts (by weight) of dry mash and scratch grain during the course of the day. However, due to the higher digestibility and safe protein content, OLYMPIC EGG MASH can be fed in greater proportion. The mash feed makes the eggs. We recommend feeding OLYMPIC EGG MASH so that it constitutes 50 to 65 per cent of the daily ration of feed. Feed only enough grain to keep the hens active and supply proper body maintenance. The skilled feeder is always on the lookout to see how his hens are eating. He cannot always rely upon feeding the scratch by weight or measure as the fowls' appetites vary with the weather, time of year, and egg production.

The president predicted that the American farmers never would unite on a program of decreased production, such as has been threatened recently by some farmer leaders.
