Out of the City—

Mrs. Henry Applegate, who for 38 years has not been in Klamath Falls, at one time her home, was here this week from Ashland. She was accompanied by Mrs. Dan Walker and Ernest Applegate. The whole party spent Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Applegate in Swan Lake valley.—Klamath Falls Herald.

National Fruit Cleaning Machine—

The National Fruit Cleaning Machine is putting on the market, a late model fruit cleaning machine, which cleans the apple of spray and dirt but does not bruise it, as has been demonstrated from last year's crop. There were 20 machines used in Hood River valley during the packing season last year and proved very satisfactory, even though they are of the old model. A small amount of fruit is still in some of the warehouses in perfect condition for so long a time, thereby proving to the most skeptical that it does not bruise the fruit or remove the wax or paraffine so necessary to the proper keeping of the apple or other fruit. The fruit is carried by a padded belt between three adjustable spiral brushes revolving in opposite directions, causing the fruit to rotate rapidly while being carried along and brushed. The capacity is 1200 boxes per day and can be increased by increasing the speed slightly. Further information can be had by addressing Miss Elizabeth Reuter, Jacksonville, Oregon. 30-fr-m

Working on Talent Ditch—

Gilbert Stuart, Medford contractor, who has charge of the relining of the irrigation ditches for the Talent district, was in the city on business today. He states he has a crew of about 15 men working in the vicinity of the Lithia springs. Besides the relining work, some construction work is being done, putting in concrete spillways and similar forms.

A New York city official, as the story is going the rounds, was walking through City Hall park with one of his commissioners. As they passed the statue of Nathan Hale, who stands with his hands behind his back, the commissioner said: "Mr. Official, don't you think that statue of Nathan Hale is a beautiful piece of work?" "Hale? Nathan Hale?" said the official in a puzzled tone. "Why, I thought that was a statue of Houdini!"—Argus.

NEW USE FOR SCOTCH LAKES

Long Famed in Song, It is Now Seriously Proposed to Develop Their Water Power.

Scotland is waking up to the fact that its lakes and waterfalls may be made to serve other purposes than providing scenic attractions for tourists. As proof of this the "Gramplan Electricity bill" has been given a second reading in the house of commons. In this a company is empowered to collect and use the waters of 15 lochs and 99 small lakes, rivers, and streams over an area of 417 square miles. The waters proposed to be utilized are estimated to be capable of generating 56,000 horse power to supply electricity in the counties of Perth, Kinross, and Forfar, and districts in four other counties. The capital is placed at $4,500,000 ($22,500,000).

That any of the beautiful lakes and falls of "Caledonia stern and wild" should be used to set the wheels of industry spinning, many in Scotland regard almost as sacrilegious desecration. And that opinion is shared by not a few Americans who are accustomed to visit Scotland annually.

But the promoters declare that the preservation of the natural beauties of Scotland is expressly provided for by the terms of the bill. And they add that when the hum of the electrically driven wheels is heard in the land and dividends begin to come in, the cry of "desecration" will be heard no more.—New York Post.

DANGER IN STEEL HORSESHOE

Substitution of Copper, It is Believed, Will Lessen Possibility of Destructive Forest Fires.

Copper horseshoes as a means of preventing forest fires have recently made their appearance in several of the national forests of the West, and, if the plans of certain forestry officials are carried into effect, this metal will supplant steel upon the hoofs of all horses to be used on public domains where there is any measure of fire hazard.

According to the supervisor of the Angeles National forest, in southern California, steel horseshoes used in flinty mountain regions may have been the cause of some of the mysterious fires that have started in the forest reserves. Heavy steel horseshoes striking against flint or hard granite may readily be the source of sparks, which, falling into dry grass or other inflammable material, would quickly cause it to burst into flames if fanned by a breeze.

The new horseshoes were given their first try-out recently in Calaveras county, California.—Popular Mechanics.

Moth-Proof Wool.

A moth-repellant has been introduced in the German market, which, it is claimed, will positively make the wool fabric absolutely moth-proof. An additional advantage of this product, known as Eulan F, is that it does not discolor the fabric, so that the wool can be dyed in bright shades without any difficulty. The product is a white powder which does not dissolve very easily in water. Acid must be added to make it dissolve. In this condition it is used in the textile mill, and it is preferable to put the woolen fabric through the moth-proofing treatment in the factory. Another form of the product is sold for use in the household. In this form the powder will dissolve very easily in water. The woolen fabric is then soaked in the solution and permitted to dry. Only a 1 per cent solution is required. Eulan F is now on the market in Germany.—From the Industrial Digest.

Affected With Myopia.

I am nearsighted, and as a consequence often get into embarrassing situations. One in particular greatly mortified me. I had started out bravely to sell books, and it was my first attempt at salesmanship. As I stepped onto a shaded porch out of the bright sunlight, I stood for a second waiting, somewhat dazed. A diminutive figure appeared on the opposite side of the screen door.

Thinking the person a child, I asked: "Is your mother in?"

Imagine my confusion when I discovered the person to be a man about seventy years of age.—Exchange.

Northcliffe Superstitions.

Lord Northcliffe had his superstitions. He was inordinately afraid of the bad luck frequently associated with 13 persons at a table. At a luncheon in his home in London last summer, 13 men sat down, including some Americans. Suddenly Lord Northcliffe exclaimed, in a horrified voice: "There are 13 at this table. Every one get up. We must wait until my secretary comes to make 14." Subsequently Lord Northcliffe gravely related to one of his guests, an American newspaper man, many tragedies which he said were the result of the seating of 13 persons at table.

So, I stand today as a candidate of no man or set of men.

I feel grateful for the hearty support I am getting from all of the above named gentlemen. I do not think any one of them has the desire to dictate to me, if I am elected. None of them have ever indicated any such desire. I am making the campaign without a pledge to any of them, nor shall I make any pledges to anybody, except to every citizen, that if you have confidence enough in me to elect me mayor, I shall appreciate the great honor and the good will pledged by your support and pledge myself to give the city my best attention and the best that is in me for a better, more economical and efficient government, with the prayer that the Great Architect of the destinies of nations and cities may give me the good judgment to administer the affairs of the city in a manner that will be a pride to citizens and of great good to the city we all love and want to see developed to greater proportions, and made even a better place in which to live and rear our families. advt

CHARLES L. LOOMIS REFUTES RUMOR ABOUT CANDIDACY

STATEMENT BY CHARLES L. LOOMIS

In order to settle some misunderstandings and misgivings in regard to my candidacy for mayor, I desire to make the following statement, and will ask the Tidings to print it as an advertisement:

I am charged by some factions as being the candidate of Jesse Winburn, and by others as being the candidate of Mr. Enders, by others as being the candidate of Mr. Greer, and others as being the candidate of Mr. Dill and Mr. Johnson. I desire here to state that I am not the candidate of any of them. Unless I can be the candidate of the people, regardless of factions and individuals, then I miss my desire. The citizens of Ashland need to be brought together in harmonious work for the upbuilding of the town. It seems to me to be one of Ashland's paramount needs, and I shall strive for that end. I absolutely refuse to be the candidate of any individual or faction. If I am elected, one citizen shall have as much influence in guiding my administration as another, regardless as to what faction they may adhere. To successfully deliver the sort of administration I hope to give Ashland, I will need the support of all the people, and if elected, I shall certainly expect that and shall try to conduct the affairs of the city in such manner as to justify it.

It is said that my candidacy was launched at a Jesse Winburn banquet, and, therefore, I am a Jesse Winburn candidate, and will be directed in my administration by him. I think a fair explanation of how I came to become a candidate is due at this time. The day that my name was first mentioned as a candidate for mayor, I had responded to a telephone invitation to attend a dinner at the Ashland hotel, given by Jesse Winburn for the purpose of getting some 50 citizens together to endorse and insist on the candidacy of Dr. R. L. Burdick for the office of mayor. I attended that dinner in good faith to urge Burdick's candidacy. Dr. Burdick was present and absolutely declined to allow his name to be used as a candidate, whereupon Mr. Greer, without my knowledge and without consulting me in regard to it, proposed my name as a candidate. His suggestion was a great surprise to me, because, up to that time, I had not considered the matter at all. After his suggestion, a petition asking me to become a candidate was circulated, and I was informed that it had been signed by every person at the tables, in number about 50, of as fine citizens as Ashland possesses. A few days after that, the railroad boys, among whom I count many very dear friends, organized a Loomis-for-Mayor club, without any suggestion from me, and pledged their unqualified support to my candidacy. In the meantime, many friends and neighbors, from every walk of life and every part of the city, called on me and urged me to accept the candidacy. I considered the matter for some time before I decided to stand as a candidate. I tried to view it from all angles. I took into consideration my physical infirmity and my mental capacity. I love Ashland and feel that a more progressive administration of her affairs would redound to her great good. So, after considering the matter from every angle, I decided to accept the place with full confidence both in my mental and physical ability to fill it efficiently, if elected.

PASTUERIZATION AND THE CREAM LINE

The results of experimental work to determine the effect of temperature of pasteurization on the creaming ability of milk is reported by Prof. H. A. Harding in Illinois Bulletin No. 237. Until 1900, commercial pasteurization was not in very considerable use. The recommendations by Russell and Hastings in 1900 that pasteurization at 140 degrees F. for 30 minutes would kill all bacteria, gave impetus to the pasteurization of milk and its more general use. Lately there has arisen a controversy as to whether this temperature and period is sufficient, and some men are now recommending pasteurization at 145 degrees for 30 minutes.

The investigation by Harding was not to determine the controversy raised by the advocates of a higher pasteurization temperature than that now generally prevailing, but rather to determine the effect of the higher temperature upon the creaming ability of the milk. He found that the volume of cream on milk begins measurably to decrease when the temperature of pasteurization rises from 142 degrees F. to 144 degrees. As the temperature goes higher the decrease in the volume of cream becomes rapidly more pronounced. At 145 degrees F. the volume of cream is decreased by 10 per cent; at 146 degrees it amounts to 16.6 per cent, and at 148 degrees it amounts to approximately 40 per cent.

The importance of these findings is that the acceptance of pasteurization of milk will be determined to no inconsiderable extent by the presence of a satisfactory layer of cream at the top. If this is not there, it will be difficult to induce the public to purchase pasteurized milk. There is an unavoidable fluctuation in the temperature of pasteurization and this rarely amounts to less than 3 degrees. Accordingly, if pasteurization is defined as heating to 145 degrees F. as a minimum for 30 minutes, such pasteurization involves heating the milk to 145 to 148 degrees F. This will, of course, result in a sharp reduction in the cream line. In his concluding paragraph, Professor Harding has this to say:

"The pasteurizing process is the most important protection which the public has against the spread of disease through milk. It is, therefore, important that this process carry the broadest practicable margin of safety. At the same time, it is equally important that the margin of safety should not be carried to such limits as to produce a milk unacceptable to the public and thereby reduce the consumption of safe, pasteurized milk."

"Repeated, careful studies by different scientists have uniformly shown that the most resistant disease germs which may enter milk are destroyed by a 15 minute heating at 140 degrees F., under such circumstances, pasteurization at 142 to 145 degrees F. for 30 minutes provides a very considerable margin of safety, both in the matter of temperature and of time of exposure."

"The proposition to require pasteurization at a minimum of 145 degrees for 30 minutes involves so large a destruction of the cream layer, which is highly esteemed by the public, that such requirement would probably result in a decreasing consumption of pasteurized milk. Accordingly, this increase in the margin of safety would hardly seem justified in the absence of any evidence that 142 to 145 degrees is not sufficient, and in the absence of any attempt to provide increased safety in other ways."
