BAPTISTS HOLD MEETING; MANY VISITORS HERE

DELEGATIONS FROM VALLEY POINTS PRESENT AT ANNUAL GATHERING

SPECIAL SERVICES AND BANQUET FEATURED

Grants Pass and Medford Each Send Good Attendance; Speeches and Decorations in Harmony with the Fall of the Year.

The annual meeting of the Rogue River association of the B. Y. P. U. convened at the Baptist church Sunday afternoon and evening, beginning at 3 o'clock. Twenty-two members were present from Medford, and 24 from Grants Pass, among whom was Miss Mildred Taylor, president of the society, who had charge of the meeting; also Dr. G. H. Young, from Portland, who is educational director of the association.

A banquet was served in the basement during the recess time between afternoon and evening sessions. The tables were decorated in Halloween style with autumn leaves and jack o' lanterns, with ghosts walking, which was in harmony with the subject, "Better Living." The first part of the meeting was the ghost of the old way of shirking the work, neglecting to give out the questions for the meeting, and failing to find the references, etc.

Miss Caribel Morehouse read a paper on "Ghosts in the Attic," which was in keeping with the subject. After that the meeting turned into a real live up-to-date meeting, led by Mrs. Eileen Travis. The jack o' lanterns were used by the ushers to take up the collection.

The meeting was adjourned to meet upstairs in the main auditorium of the church, Miss Mildred Taylor from Grants Pass presiding. A selection from the orchestra, "A Medley of Old Hymns," after which Rev. Finch led in prayer, followed by scripture reading by the pastor, Rev. B. C. Miller. Miss Carvel sang in her most impressive manner the song, "I Shall Not Be Moved," with Mr. Leedom performing violin obligato, and Miss Morehouse piano accompaniment.

The offertory was "Meditation," rendered by the orchestra, after which Dr. Young delivered the address on "The Authority and Power of Jesus Christ," first stating he had a word to say in perfect harmony with the spiritual demonstrations that had taken place in the Baptist church in the past few weeks, not only on account of the friendship he had always entertained for Mr. Miller, but on account of the fame of the Rogue River association being known far and wide.

WINBURN IS FETED AT BIG BANQUET IN CIVIC BUILDING

ASHLAND COMPLIMENTED FOR BEAUTIFUL CLUB

HOST OF DONOR'S FRIENDS PAY HIM GLOWING TRIBUTE SATURDAY

Speakers Unanimous in Voicing Approval of the Attractiveness of the Building and of Motives Prompting Its Erection.

Limited only by the facilities of the building, a host of friends of Jesse Winburn tendered him a banquet in the newly completed Civic club building Saturday evening. In perfect harmony with the season, the rooms were beautifully decorated with fruits and autumn leaves, while the spirit of Halloween was also embodied in the decorations.

Special guests at the occasion were Walter M. Pierce, of La Grande, and Mrs. Frank Irvine, wife of the editor of the Portland Journal. B. R. Greer presided as toastmaster.

"I came to Ashland when I thought I had found the most beautiful spot in the world," remarked Jesse Winburn, in response to urgent requests for a few words, after a few fitting remarks by Mr. Greer, stating the motif for the dinner, "When I found the building was to be used for children to a great extent and when I found that the further construction of the building had been stopped by lack of money, I felt very sad. I love children. When I first learned of the building I was much surprised, and now as I look about me and see the finished effects, the interior decorations so tastefully carried out by the ladies of the city, I find that I had not dreamed of such a beautiful building. I wish that I could do much more for the people of Ashland because they deserve it. If I can do things like this, what more can I expect! The very thought that I am permitted to be here and have so many friends is enough. As God is my witness, I forgive those that have sought to put obstacles in my path, and I hope that they will forgive me."

Senator Walter M. Pierce, of La Grande, in response to a call from Toastmaster Greer, said:

"I am very glad to be in Ashland again for a day and see the gem of the south country, and this fine building, and to be able to sit beside the donor. I wonder how any man, who for so many years lived in the cold atmosphere of the business world, could, after being discouraged, learn that his inspiration came from Charlie Loomis. What a novel it would make! How I wish that I might be permitted to write it! Charlie Loomis is happy tonight because he has done something. Jesse Winburn is happier tonight than he was while piling up one thousand dollars upon another. Life is worth living to anyone who does something for others. The keynote of true happiness is service."

"The ladies of Ashland have the reputation in Portland of being the best civic workers in the state," declared Mrs. Frank Irvine, in saying a few words. "I am sure that with this beautiful building, this community will take the lead in this sort of work in the state."

"I want to compliment you on the splendid results you have attained in the rearing of this building," Charlie Loomis said. "It will stand as a monument to the intelligent energy of the women of the Ashland Civic club. This is a splendid building, reared for the purpose of supplying this city with a public place suitable for the entertainment of visitors who may come here both from abroad and from the territory adjacent to Ashland. It is in keeping with Ashland's hospitality."

"I want to say to you that while among many of the essential things Ashland needs, besides more water, more lights, a big hotel, more cooperation, is more Jesse Winburns. Not only for the generous gifts he has made the city, but the spirit of advancement and achievement he has exercised."

"I feel highly complimented in being allowed the privilege of being present at this time, when we have with us as distinguished a visitor as our probable incoming governor—Walter Pierce."

"And to the people of Medford, had I the chance to address them, I would say that the six successful years 'Pop' Gates has steered them through, his work will stand a shining mark long after he has passed to private life."

"I wish to say a few words along the line of getting behind our own producers and manufacturers. Let's eat Ashland bread. Ashland made butter and flour; let's buy our shoes and coats and hats at home. I can't recall a time that I've seen Sears and Roebuck registered at our hotel. They have never built any business blocks in our town, have never helped to pay any of our taxes and I doubt if they ever drank any of our so-called polluted water."

"Ashland is quite a railroad town, the railroad payroll cuts a big figure, as it represents the earnings of a skilled class of labor. The railroad employes and their families occupy a prominent place among us, generous to a fault, always ready with their dollars and hands for any public work or celebration, or anything for the benefit of Ashland."

"The small fruit industry must be looked after. Now that we have the good roads and trucks to facilitate the distribution, we must have the water to irrigate the acreage."

"Ashland and the surrounding country offers many opportunities. We are fast becoming the Mecca for the seekers of rest and recreation. We are a virgin country along that line. Good roads are fast becoming prominent, stretching far out to such points as Lake of the Woods, Crater and Diamond lakes, the Marble Caves and many places vastly interesting. The key to unlock all these is the fine big tourist road. With that we are ready for all newcomers. Our location is ideal. The elevation is just right. We miss the extreme wet of the north and the heat of the south. We not only catch the tourist travel here on the coast, but those from the east and middle west are bound either to come the north route and come through here or go back the southern way."

"I thank you for this opportunity to express my sentiments."

Miss Grace H. Chamberlain, president of the Ashland Civic club, and to whose untiring efforts the building was started and continued in the face of huge obstacles, said she spoke for every woman in Ashland, and tendered a vote of thanks to Jesse Winburn, and in finishing her remarks stated that every effort would be made to more closely knit the women of the city together.

Voicing the sentiments of the others retarding the building, C. E. Gates, Medford mayor, declared that his city needed such a building, but thought the erection would be greatly delayed owing to the fact that Medford had no Jesse Winburn. He emphatically declared that if Winburn was ever forced to leave the canyon in which he had built "Sap and Salt," that the people of Med-

GALLONS AND GALLONS OF CONFISCATED BOOZE MAY SOON BE RELEASED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The government may have to release 250,000 gallons of whisky seized from shops flying foreign flags outside of the three mile limit. The status of such liquor, and also the arrest of hundreds of persons charged with conspiracy to violate the revenue laws came before the department of justice today.

Federal district attorneys are swamped by appeals from the defendant's attorneys asserting that the government should dismiss the cases, some of which have been pending for two years.

The attorney general is expected to issue instructions clearing the issue soon.

The release of the Canadian schooner "Emerald" with a thousand cases on board is said to set a precedent which other owners will stand on.

SEVERANCE TAX IS IMPERATIVE STATES PIERCE

NOMINEE FOR GOVERNOR TALKS IN CHAUTAUQUA BUILDING SATURDAY

ECONOMIES ARE ISSUES IN PRESENT CAMPAIGN

Religion Not Main Element Despite Efforts to Make It Appear So; Few Gather to Hear Addresses in Armory.

"When I become governor of Oregon I shall become governor of all the people with one object only, to do those things that will benefit, improve and advance the welfare of this state," declared Walter M. Pierce, candidate for the governorship of Oregon, speaking to a crowd of nearly 500 people gathered in the chautauqua building Saturday night. Owing to the lack of heat in the huge auditorium, the crowd was somewhat smaller than had been anticipated, and the chilly October night air prevented many that would otherwise have attended the meeting.

"I am leading a fight that means everything to the small home owner, the farmer and the stockman," he continued. "The contest in this campaign is party economies. Shall practically one-fourth of Oregon continue to bear the cost of maintaining a state government in Oregon similar to that of Iowa and Michigan, states that have five times the wealth and population?"

Oregon's present taxation was the object of much discussion by Mr. Pierce, who stated that in five years the state had passed from a moderately taxed state to one carrying the highest taxes in the United States. He explained how the present highway plans continue to call for five millions of dollars a year, two millions in interest, two millions for payment on bonds and one million for repairs; two millions for primary education, a similar sum for higher education, one million for market roads and other similar expenditures.

"We cannot hope to run the state under $14,000,000," Mr. Pierce said in closing his address. "We must have an income tax to raise from three to four millions of dollars. We must have a severance tax to raise an equal amount. We must amend the millage tax to be voted by the people, two mills for primary education and two mills for higher education; one million for market roads, so that the state tax commission will not be obliged to levy the millage if there is money in the state treasury that can be used to meet the amounts required under the millage taxes. Taxation is the main issue of the campaign despite efforts to make it religious."

While the meeting in the Chautauqua building was in progress, another political gathering, sponsored by the Independent Voters League of Jackson county, was staged in the Armory, at which time, A. E. Reames, E. E. Kelly, W. M. Colvig, Miss Alice Hanley and W. H. Gore, all of Medford, spoke to a small number of people. Colonel Gordon Voorhies presided as chairman. By actual count, taken during the height of the oratory, 63 people were present, though this number varied slightly during the evening.

Taking into consideration the counter attractions of Saturday night, the proportionate amount of interest in the coming election November 7 can be estimated by the size of the crowds that gathered to hear the two political meetings. Roughly speaking, the proportion appears to be 5 to 1. Whether this fact has any bearing upon the probable results of the election can better be estimated on November 8.

Sells Home Here—Frank Blevins, who has been in Douglas county at work near Riddle for the summer, was in town Saturday calling on old friends. He has sold the home place here on Oberlin street, where the F. M. Blevins family formerly lived for so many years.

Home from Visit—Henry Van Prooyne, of scenic Drive, has returned from a visit in the Willamette valley.
