NOT AS SHE HAD PICTURED

Girl Who Had Herself Paged in Hotel Unprepared for Meeting With Flippant Individual.

The girl had never been paged in a hotel. Time after time she had heard the bellboys go by calling out names, and always she had envied the young women who got up and followed them to the telephone.

It got to be a positive mania with her—this desire to be paged—and finally she persuaded one of her friends to telephone her at a hotel at a specified time.

She waited in the lobby, sitting on the edge of her seat in excitement, until the boy appeared.

"Miss Brown! Miss Brown!" She rose excitedly. "I am Miss Brown," she said.

"Gentleman waiting to see you out front."

She looked rather surprised; that had not been in the scheme. But perhaps he had changed his mind. She followed the boy obediently, and was led face to face with a perfect stranger.

Her face grew pink with confusion as she gazed at him, and he, realizing the mistake, watched her in amusement. He was a rather loudly dressed young man with a great air of assurance.

"Not so good," he said slowly, and then, as an after thought, "but not so bad, either!"

And the girl fled in embarrassment.

OFFER MARK TWAIN REFUSED

Nothing Sadder, He is Reported to Have Said, Than Editorship of Humorous Periodical.

About that time my wife helped me put another temptation behind me. This was an offer of sixteen thousand dollars a year, for five years, to let my name be used as editor of a humorous periodical.

I praise her for furnishing her help in resisting that temptation, for it is her due. There was no temptation about it, in fact, but she would have offered her help just the same if there had been one. I can conceive of many wild and extravagant things when my imagination is in good repair, but I can conceive of nothing quite so wild and extravagant as the idea of my accepting the editorship of a humorous periodical.

I should regard that as the saddest of all occupations. If I should undertake it I should have to add to it the occupation of undertaker, to relieve it in some degree of its cheerlessness. —From "Unpublished Chapters from the Autobiography of Mark Twain" in Harper's Magazine.

Where Long Necks Are Stylish. In Burma, among the Karens, a long neck is the ambition of every woman. Her mother starts thinking about this when her daughter is a baby, and starts to accomplish this swan-like effect when the tots are scarcely able to walk.

The method employed is a series of heavy brass rings, which are as thick as your little finger. These are put around the child's neck, and as she grows, more rings are added, thus forcing her neck to lengthen out. More rings are added year after year; as the girl grows into womanhood. Twenty-one of these coils is the average worn, although 25 have been achieved.

The 21-ring-collared woman is thought beautiful, but the 25-ringed lady is considered a raving beauty under the Karens of Burma.

Hidden Brine River. A thousand feet beneath the town of Midland, Mich., run rivers of brine charged with calcium, sodium, magnesium, strontium, bromine and chlorine. Forty pumping wells raise the brine, and separate processes release from it the bases of photographic emulsions, medicines, cement, tanning materials, perfumes, preservatives and cold-storage solutions. The magnesium was used for war flares, and now, combined in a secret alloy, furnishes metal one-third the weight of aluminum, sustaining a pressure of 24,000 pounds per square inch. In the form of gas-engine pistons, after a test equivalent to that of a motor car running 30 miles an hour continuously for 35,000 miles scarcely a sign of wear was discernible.—Scientific American.

Of Course Not! A negro boarded a trolley. After a word with the conductor, he shuffled toward the door again. An inspector, who happened to be in the car, said to him, "surely you don't want to get off so soon—and you haven't paid."

"Ah want ter go ter Whopple street," said the negro, "an' de conductor says dah's no sich place." "Well, there isn't," said the conductor. "Den dah's sure no good in ma gwine dah."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Baffin Land. Baffin Land, a barren insular tract in British North America, lies between latitude 61 degrees and 72 degrees north, with Lancaster sound on the north, Baffin bay and Davis strait on the east, the Gulf of Bothnia and Fox channel on the west, and Hudson bay on the south. The area is about 238,000 square miles. It is inhabited by a few Eskimos, but is visited occasionally by whalers.

ROBBINS URGES "OREGON SPIRIT" AT C. OF C. FORUM

and not wait for an outsider to come in and build it.

Following the close of the forum, Frank Miller met with the directors of the chamber of commerce, at which time he explained that the interstate commerce commission is hearing the S. P. and Central Pacific unmerger case in Washington, and that it would come to the coast to hold further hearings at some early date. Five cities will be visited—Portland, Seattle, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Salt Lake. He further explained that the Willamette Lumbermen's association, closely identified with the S. P., has agreed to pay the expenses of one witness from each city in the state. All cities in Oregon, which are interested, are asked to appoint one representative to attend one of these hearings. Those selected will be subpoenaed to appear before the I. C. C. which will question them at that time. Ashland will appoint one such representative, though he has not been selected at this time.

Returns from California—B. C. Hubbard returned this evening from Igo, Calif., where he was called several days ago on account of the death of his brother, Dayton A. Hubbard. Mr. Hubbard was quite well known in Ashland, having visited here frequently. Mrs. J. W. Hatcher of this city is a sister of the deceased man's wife.

Many Pears Shipped—Nearly twice as many pears were shipped from the Rogue river valley this year than last. In all 1326 carloads have left this section of the state this season, as compared with 690 in 1921. Apple shipping from various points in the valley will be continued for some time, about 125 carloads remaining to be exported. The total number of carloads so far this season are but 70. The crop last year amounted to 670 carloads.

Dinner at Baptist Church—A dinner will be served Thursday evening at 6 o'clock at the Baptist church by the Reds of the Sunday school to the other portion of the school, who are known as the Blues. A membership contest was held during the late summer and ended about the time he Price meetings began. As the Blues won the contest, the Reds are now giving a dinner to them. All members of the Sunday school are invited to attend the dinner.

ROW OVER WOOD ENDS IN SHOOTING

VANCOUVER, Wash., Nov. 21.—Frank Schaeffer, aged 40, an unmarried rancher of near Reedville, 12 miles north of Vancouver, is in St. Josephs hospital here suffering with five bullet wounds, and George W. Edwards, also a rancher of the same neighborhood, is a fugitive from justice as a result of a shooting in Schaeffer's cabin Sunday. The shooting followed a dispute over the sale of 19 cords of wood belonging to Schaeffer.

Canals of Mars. In 1877 Schiaparelli, an Italian astronomer, discovered features on the surface of Mars which have resulted in almost endless discussion as the "canals of Mars." The canals are fine straight lines or ditches which cross the surface of the planet in various directions. Some astronomers have maintained that they are artificial, and that they probably are used as irrigation ditches. These lines sometimes appear to be double, but observation has disclosed that they do not change their position.
