The Kirbys expect to make some changes in the running of the market from what it was during their previous ownership, when the killing and much of the other work was done in connection with the East Side meat market. The slaughtering will now be done on the Kirby ranch near Talent, and the market will be run entirely independent of the East Side market.

COUNTY CLUB WORK ROUNDS OUT 1922 WITH FINE RECORD

The boys' and girls' club work for the year 1922 ended on November 1. However, one of the most noteworthy features of club work in the county took place during the present month, is the announcement of C. C. Cate, Jackson county agent.

The stock judging team representing the Ashland Calf club competed in a judging contest at the Pacific International Livestock exposition at Portland and were successful in landing fifth place in a field of 23 teams from all over the state and Washington.

This was conceded to be very good indeed, considering that this is the first year of judging in any nature and competition was between teams most of which had had one, two or three years' experience.

One of the members of the team, Barnard Joy, of Ashland, placed second in individual high honors of all competing members, with a score of 755 points. If this team can be kept intact a better showing still may be expected next year.

The Ashland calf club is under the local leadership of A. C. Joy, who deserves praise for the untiring effort he has made to help the boys get as much out of club work as possible. This was a 100 per cent club.

Another club leader in Ashland who has done some good, hard work in plotting a club through the year is Miss Mary Spencer. The members of her club were in the garden project. Not all members finished in this work but some fine work was done.

New members for these clubs will undoubtedly be welcomed, although the actual work of the clubs will not start until early spring.
