CDD POWER OF STALACTITES

Walls of English Limestone Cavery Reverberate to the Beating of Explorer's Heart.

C. F. D. Long of Caius college, Cam bridge, and York, has made a thor ough exploration of the Stump Cross range of limestone caverns near Drygill, on the high road between Pate ley Bridge and Grassington. He carried out his underground journey during the night, and alone.

One notable feature of Mr. Long's later discovery is the bell-like notes of pure musical tone given out by the vibration of stalactites on being gently struck. In one cavern the colors of the stalactites ranged from yellow to red, and grayish blue, suggesting iron and lead impregnation, and some were of the purest white. All were translucent.

Another feature was a grottoes, where the walls reverberated to the beat of the explorer's heart, producing the effect of a huge stetho-

The vertical extent of the caverns from the entrance to the deepest point reached was between two hundred and three hundred feet, and the lineal extent, allowing for the many branchings and spirally decending loops, was probably not far short of a mile -London Times.

STILL MYSTERY TO CHEMISTS

Men of Science Have Not Yet Discovered the Real Nature of the X-Ray.

It was in 1895 that Prof. Conrad be passed through a certain k'nd of 67- eod-tf glass bulb, from which the air had been exhausted, the resultant "light" (so called in spite of the fact that it is not apparent to the eye), would penetrate the flesh and other semisolid substances and reveal objects on the other side. For want of a better name to give to this disturbance of the ether, Professor Roentgen called it the X-ray, "x" being the accepted symbol for an unknown quanti-

> The real nature of the X-ray is still undiscovered. The ray itself is generated by a battery, the wires of which are connected with two electrodes, one of which is a concave disc of aluminum and the other a flat disc of platinum. The current is then discharged through a glass vacuum tube and produces the ether disturbance which renders flesh or clothing semi-transparent, while glass, metals, bones and mineral substances are generally opaque to it.
