Holiday Season Opened

Many people enjoyed the window shopping habit in Medford Friday evening, when the holiday season was officially opened in that city. The windows were very attractively decorated. Promptly at 7:30 o'clock all the light in the city were shut off for a few seconds. During the darkness, merchants pulled up the shades, and when the lights reappeared, the effect was very good. Music by a band and street dancing were features of the evening.

Russian Children in Dire Need of Clothing-- Many May Die from Exposure, Says Report To Hoover

"Rags—why, America doesn't know what rags are in Russia," was the exclamation recently made by a world-famous Russian singer who was on his way to America. And his comment is more forcefully borne out by a cablegram sent by Col. William N. Haskell, head of the American Relief Administration, to Herbert Hoover, head of the organization, in which Col. Haskell forecasted that millions of children and adults saved from famine last winter face death from exposure this winter because of the lack of warm clothing. Particularly urgent is the need of the children, for many of these who have been going to A. R. A. kitchens for food will be unable to go now because of the lack of wraps of any kind. In the homes for children too, the need is almost as urgent, for the general costume of the little ones in these institutions has been found to consist of but one garment—made of flour sacking, or other coarse material. As fuel is almost impossible to obtain, the plight of these little ones, in a winter as severe as that of Canada is desperate, Colonel Haskell says. In some ways the condition of the adult population is even worse, for the cost of such clothing as there is for sale in the cities is far above their reach. With a pair of shoes costing more than a month's wages and an overcoat of even fair quality equivalent in price to a year's pay, the Russian workman is "out of luck". To help in meeting this crisis, the American Relief Administration has instituted a system of "Clothing Remittances", similar in plan and operation to the famous Hoover Food Remittances, and several hundred banks and other organizations which co-operated in handling money for food packages are being asked to do the same for persons who wish to send clothing remittances. For $20—which is the price of a "Clothing Remittance"—any person or group may have delivered to any designated person in Russia a package containing approximately the following clothing material: 4 2-3 yards of 56-inch, 20-ounce dark wool cloth sufficient to make one suit of clothes for either a man or woman or for two children's outer garments; 4 yards of black cotton lining; 16 yards of muslin sufficient for four suits of underclothing; 8 yards of flannel-lette, sufficient for two men's shirts or two women's shirt waists, and buttons and thread sufficient to make up the material. Many Food Remittances were sent for "general relief"—that is, were not designated to any particular beneficiary, and it has been decided that Clothing Remittances may be handled in a similar manner. These will be used in the most urgent cases, some of which are pathetic.

Mrs. Angell to Speak

Tomorrow evening will be the praise service of the Presbyterian Women's Missionary society. All who have heard Mrs. Joseph Angell speak on missions will want to be there; all who have not heard her, should not miss this opportunity of hearing this woman who loves the Lord with her mind and has had a wide study and experience with her soul, which is consecrated to the Lord, and her heart, which yearns for the lost, and with all her strength which is given to His service. God music by the choir and Dr. Woods' family orchestra insure a splendid program. The offering for missions ought to be a generous one.

CARED LITTLE ABOUT MONEY

Daniel Webster Refused to Be Bothered Over Comparatively Paltry Questions of Finance.

In A. B. Farquhar's "The First Million the Hardest" he optimistically points out that the senate has greatly improved in business integrity since Daniel Webster's day, when senators could not be expected to bother about paying their bills. Mr. Farquhar was once talking with Mr. Corcoran (of the Corcoran art gallery fame) in his bank at Washington. Daniel Webster had just been in to borrow money and had asked the cashier to discount his note for $100. The bank did not discount notes that were not indorsed, so Webster went out and brought in a note for $200, indorsed by another senator with whom he had promised to divide the profits. Mr. Corcoran remarked that the only value of the note was as a curiosity. It was never paid, and the Riggs bank still has it. "Daniel Webster was very careless about all of his personal affairs," says Mr. Farquhar. "He was safe to be scrupulous about paying his gambling debts, but he did not bother with little bills. He often thought it quite enough to give a creditor a copy of his signature without bothering to honor the promise to pay on it. "He was such a powerful, leonine sort of a man and his voice was so glorious and magnificent that I do not believe any one in the country would have ventured to mention such a trivial thing as money in his presence. Few more impressive men have ever lived—in fact, he had been called a living lie, because, as was said, 'no man could possibly be as great as Webster looked.'"

REALLY IS "CRANE'S FOOT"

Word "Pedigree" a Corruption of Term Which Was Applied to Idea by the French. Perhaps, after all, it would be more appropriate to call a family "tree" a family "crane's foot." When one speaks of a person's "pedigree" he does not, at least consciously, mean to infer that this has anything in common with the foot of a crane. But this happens to be the literal meaning of the word, which, like a number of others, has found its way into English because of the difficulty in applying the proper pronunciation to a French phrase. A pedigree is, of course, nothing more than a list of ancestors, and this, when blocked out in the manner dear to the hearts of genealogists, takes the form of connecting lines radiating from the common progenitor of the family to his descendants. The French, always fond of painting word pictures of familiar objects, referred to a chart of this nature as a "ped-de-grue," or crane's foot, on account of the resemblance between the two. The English appropriated the term bodily and translated it phonetically as "pedigree."

None of the Apple Goes to Waste.

The thoroughness with which the apple is now worked over and utilized by some manufacturers makes it comparable with the packing-house pig that leaves only a futile squeal. In many of the apple-using factories the apples are first pressed to produce cider, which may be sold as such or may be manufactured into vinegar. After thorough pressing the pomace is treated with hot water to remove the pectin, which, after purification, is sold in either liquid or solid form to manufacturers of jellies and similar products and to housewives. The much wasted and squeezed residue is dried, ground and sold as cattle food.—Department of Agriculture Bulletin.

When Does He Work?

"May I speak with Mr. Wombat?" "He is at lunch." "I telephoned at 2 o'clock and he was at lunch then. It is now nearly five." "Well, he's at dinner now."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
