What Constitutes Advertising
In order to allay a misunderstanding among some as to what constitutes news and what advertising, we print this very simple rule, which is used by newspapers to differentiate between them: "ALL future events, where an admission charge is made or a collection is taken IS ADVERTISING."

THE GOLDEN RULE:—As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them. Luke 6: 31.

ASK AND YE SHALL RECEIVE
At the close of a three-day session held recently at Walla Walla, Wash., members of the state board granted paroles to 80 out of 91 applicants and recommended 25 out of 70 applications for commutation of sentence to Governor Hart for action.

Murderers sentenced to life imprisonment generally serve but from 15 to 20 years for the crime; lesser criminals, sentenced for indefinite sentences are usually turned back to prey upon the society they were ordered to leave; seldom does an inmate of a state penal institution ever serve out his time.

Of what use are our police forces, our prosecuting attorneys, our courts and our penal institutions, whose upkeep are such a burden upon the state, when after heavy costs for capture and prosecution, the prisoner is released upon demand. The average convicted man takes his sentence lightly, knowing of the appeal that can be made, the work of friends on the "outside" to obtain his release after serving but a portion of the period of incarceration.

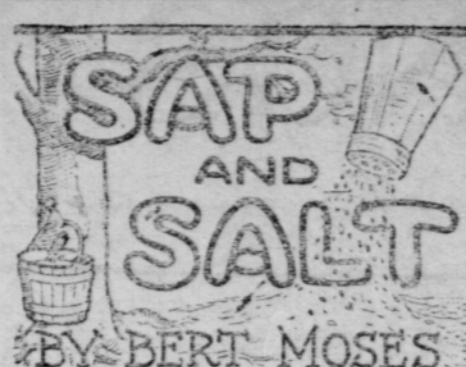

Paroles in exceptional cases are very well, and in many instances the former prisoner will redeem himself, but when any body of men grant paroles in the wholesale manner as did the board of directors for the Washington penitentiary, it is time to call a halt.

Massachusetts still has its Lodge, California its Johnson, Michigan did have its Newberry, Oregon is a strong contender for honors, with Senator Stanfield.

Press dispatches say a commission has been working for the past six months on the problem of who started the war. Never mind who started it, we know who finished it.

Some people's heads are as bald inside as they are outside.

Seems Reasonable.
We do not in the least object to a row in an adjoining apartment. But if we are kept awake by it we think it only fair and equitable that we should be permitted thoroughly to understand and enjoy it.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Appetite laughs at laws and supreme courts.

When fuel is scarce, loose boards on a fence supply an irresistible temptation.

A hobby that gets you up early in the morning is one that will add to your years.

When a good thing comes along, everybody should shove a little and make room for it.

The thing that counts biggest in business is the number of times the cash register rings.

W. C. T. U. Column

While visiting our mid-winter fair, be sure to go to the Nataorium and make yourself at home at the W. C. T. U., take time to read posters and help yourself to some literature. A picture will be taken of the booth.

The following poem was presented by Mrs. W. G. Curry, taken from the Brockwayville Record, of Brockwayville, Pa., dated November 24, 1922:

THE WHITE RIBBON (Dedicated to the White Ribboners at the World and National conventions, Philadelphia, Pa., November 11-19, 1922.)

'Tis a modest little bow, Dainty, neat and white as snow; Emblematic of a purpose in its birth. Born in faith and hope and love, Reindorsed by Heaven above, Now its radiant beams engrild all the earth.

Both in form and beauty rare, This its motto to declare: "To our God and Home and Country ever true."

Neath its law-compelling sway, Prohibition's here to stay! 'Till the sun and moon ad stars shall fade from view.

JUNIOR HI NOTES

John McHale died at the Granite City Hospital Sunday morning, November 19, from an ulcerated tooth which resulted in an abscess on the brain.

John had been a pupil in Junior High for two years and was well liked by every one. He took a great interest in activities, being right guard on the school football team. Flowers were brought by many of his friends, and six of the football players acted as pall-bearers. They were the following: Art Burns, Al Parr, James Herr, A. Morgan, Stephen Judlow and W. Hill.

Junior High is planning to exhibit several different articles in the Winter Fair. The seventh grade is going to enter exhibits of towels and dresses, and the eighth B girls are going to make a display of gelatine. The Cafeteria Class is going to serve a meal some time during the Winter Fair.

A large American flag now decorates the assembly of Junior High. Seven hundred and eighty-three is the average number of Junior High students served every month in the Cafeteria.

Evelyn Miller, Mary Howard and Harry Creighton are new members of the Glee Club.

From November 20 to 27, nine new pupils entered Junior High. They are from the following places: Two from Everett, Wash., one from Portland, one from Medford, and one from Eagle Point.

The 7-A and 8-A girls are going to play for the championship in the basketball series Monday.

ALMUNI NOTES

Mingus Aitken, who is a Freshman at U. of O., spent the Thanksgiving vacation at home. All he seemed to know or say was U. of O. and "Bend over Brosh."

Mable Troit was home for the week-end from Dratz, where she teaches school.

The football squad have ordered sweaters from Alfred Payne, former A. H. S. student, who represents a Portland knitting house.

Harland McWilliams, who graduated from A. H. S. last year, is making good as principal, superintendent, proprietor, board of trustees, teacher and janitor of the Little Red School House on the Green Springs road. "Mac" gave a successful basket ball social at his school last Friday evening, and had many of his high school friends as guests.

Etha Abbott, who graduated in the class of '21, is taking a P. G. course in Lincoln High at Portland.

AMERICAN LEGION

"Very intemperate and exaggerated," is the characterization made by George R. Wilbur, of Hood River, department commander of the American Legion in Oregon, of the report cabled from Paris quoting Dr. Edmund L. Gros, delegate to the national convention of the Legion at New Orleans from continental Europe, as saying that the conference was ruled by a mob and that drunkenness was prevalent.

"There was plenty of boisterousness and hilarity, but not any more than one observes at any convention the size of the one in New Orleans," continued Commander Wilbur. "There was no destruction of property. The action of the convention and the resolutions adopted marked it as temperate and progressive. It occurs to me that the delegate from Paris failed to distinguish between the convention delegates and the very large number of irresponsible young men who swarmed in from neighboring towns of Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi to take advantage of the occasion for a good time. Many of these were not ex-service men and many who were did not wear Legion buttons."

"Dr. Gros was disappointed because the convention refused to grant a subsidy to Paris post in the way of financial aid. I wonder if he did not go home with a grrouch."

Norihwest is Rapidly Becoming Mecca for Tourists of America

That the Pacific northwest is increasingly popular as a national playground is shown in figures just given out by the Portland office of the United States forest service. The estimate, which is based on reports from the forest rangers, gives a total of 1,029,972 people who sought recreation within the boundaries of the national forests of Oregon and Washington during 1922. Of this number, 457,706 visited the national forest of Oregon and 572,266 those of Washington.

The figures include automobile travelers, pedestrians and others. Of these, 734,494 came by automobile; 80,203 were hunters and fishermen; 173,300 lingered to enjoy the privileges of the forest camps, and 3884 had permits for summer homes. With this heavy recreational use of the national forests, which is encouraged by the forest service as having a distinct value in the life of the nation, comes an increased hazard for man-caused fires, according to forestry officials. They point to the fact that 58 per cent of the fires in the Oregon national forests, and 76 per cent of the Washington national forests during 1922, were man-caused; of these 21 per cent in Oregon and 31 per cent in Washington were caused by campers and smokers. The federal foresters further point out that the continued success of the tourist industry in the northwest is vitally dependent upon the prevention of forest fires, for, they assert, the tourist cannot be expected to come again, and bring his friends, if he is offered nothing better than blackened hillsides and smoke-hidden mountains.

Sedan's Slow Development. It has taken 277 years to develop the one-passenger sedan, carried on poles by men, into the luxurious seven-passenger, gas-driven sedan of 1922. In the first three-quarters of the Eighteenth century the sedan was at its zenith of usefulness in England, though it was in general use in Naples in 1645. The nobility and people of wealth owned their own beautifully decorated sedans, which were often padded and cushioned with brocaded silks.

The sedans stood in the lobby of the town mansion ready for instant use, and it was an interesting sight to see several gilt sedans, carried by flunkies and escorted by "link boys" bearing the richly dressed members of the family. When the family was delivered in safety from footpads, the link boys thrust their flambeaux into the trumpet-shaped extinguishers which were placed at each "door cheek" of the high and mighty, and disappeared until time for the home journey.

Better suited than coaches to the steep streets and narrow lanes of Edinburgh, sedans were more used, it is said, than even in London. Now they have all gone into discard and are only to be seen in museums as curiosities.

It Would Ruin Them.

Roberts and Walker had discussed the question of life after death for more than two hours. Roberts held that the grave was merely a gate into a greater and eternal life. Walker could not be convinced of the existence of the hereafter.

"Say what you will," Walker insisted, "I cannot help but believe that death ends all."

"I don't see how you, a lawyer, can say that," Roberts retorted. "Why, if death ended everything most of you lawyers would starve!"—Kansas City Star.

Romance and Mush.

The woman has a friend whose little boy is a devotee of the movies. But not long ago he came home rather bored. The movie had been about romance, he said, at least, that was its title. So curiously did he pronounce the word that his mother felt confident that he didn't know what the word means.

"Son," she asked him, "do you know what romance means?"

"Sure," he said, and then added disgustedly, "it means mush."—Chicago Journal.

KLAMATH FALLS, Dec. 9.—Notice of appeal from Circuit Judge Skipworth's decision which decreed the Main street court house the official Klamath county seat of government was served on the opposing attorney by the county court.

County Clerk Delap had started moving the clerk's office into the Main street building. The notice of appeal came on the heels of this move, but County Judge Bunnell would not say that the clerk moving had hastened the court's action.

Birds and Animals Exterminated. Louis Agassiz Fuertes, the well-known naturalist, says that about fifty species of birds and animals have been exterminated in the United States, while several others are on the verge of extermination. The buffalo (or bison) is not extinct, there being nearly 70,000 living buffaloes in the United States today.
