LOST SLEEP OVER NOTHING Explorer's Story of a Bad Night He Spent in Venezuela Makes Amusing Reading.

William J. La Varre, Jr., who discovered diamonds in South America, tells as follows of an exciting adventure he had in Venezuela, says the World's Work.

The nearest I have ever come to catching up with adventure was just over the boundary in Venezuela when I sought the hospitality of a night at the cabin of a Spanish ranchero in the mountains. He provided me with food and shelter and I tried to convince him that I was conferring as much distinction on him as he was conferring kindness on me by showing him a letter of recommendation from the President of his country. I then discovered that my host was a revolutionist and one of the President's bitterest enemies. He did not withdraw his hospitality, however, so I swung my hammock on his porch and was about to drop off to sleep when I overheard him and a companion talking in low tones. Their concluding remark in Spanish was: "We won't kill him till morning." I spent an almost sleepless night with my revolver thrust in the breast of my shirt and with one eye always half open for trouble. In the gray of the dawn I saw a figure emerge from the house carrying in its hand a glittering rifle barrel. I carefully got my pistol ready for action and kept it trained on the figure without shifting my position in the hammock. The figure advanced to the edge of the porch, turned its back to me, took firing position and blazed away. Instantly loud squeals from the brush resounded and to my immense relief I learned that the discussion of the night before referred to the pig which was to be slaughtered for my breakfast.

Kindly Cardinal Manning Had Caustic Wit, Which He Only Occasionally Employed.

Cardinal Manning had a caustic wit and he loved to "take down" those who exhibited pomposity. In "Pages From the Past," John Ayscough (Rt. Rev. Mgr. Count Beckersstaffe Drew) tells how the cardinal snubbed an ostentatious prelate.

Once he brought a very magnificent bishop, who by no means despised ornament, to see St. Thomas' seminary.

"It is very plain," remarked his lordship, scanning the rather austere facade.

"You are right," rejoined the cardinal most sweetly. "Quite. There is nothing vulgar about it."

On another occasion the same prelate was a fellow guest, with the cardinal, of royalty. The bishop came in purple; the cardinal presently arrived in his ordinary black coat, breeches, gaiters, and apron; to whom the bishop rushed up, much perturbed at thus eclipsing in splendor a prince of the church.

"Never mind, my dear lord," said the cardinal. "It does not matter. I dare say no one will notice you."

Grasshoppers' Favorite Diet. When various spring grains are available the grasshoppers prefer oats to any of the others, reports a United States Department of Agriculture investigator in Montana. However, when food is scarce the hoppers will not go far out of the way to search for the plants that please their palates most.—Agricultural Department Bulletin.
