Caveman's Hearth. What we know of our cave-dwelling ancestors we have gleaned chiefly from the relics left by the cavemen in their places of habitation in caverns and holes in the rock. Marett, the anthropologist, tells of a cave in Jersey, near the Bay of St. Brelaide, where scientists dug down through some twenty feet of clay and rock rubbish, probably carried there in the course of the last Ice age that mantled Europe, and found large stones that had dropped up the fire, and even some of the ashes. Bones were found in a heap of food-refuse, which, when examined, proved to be the remains of the woolly rhinoceros, the reindeer, two kinds of horses, of a wild ox and of a deer. Thirteen human teeth were found in the food-heap. The diners had also left their knives—flint chipped on one side.

Chinese Bird Lovers.

Birds play an important part in the domestic life of the Chinese. Besides using their flesh, eggs, and even their nests as food, they keep a great many as pets. Indeed their fondness for birds is one of the most pleasant features of their national character. Birds furnish them with much amusement. Some, like the pelican and cormorant, they teach to fish for them. Several kinds of bird pets are taught to catch seeds thrown into the air after jumping from perches held in the hand. Except in winter one can always see people going into the open country early in the morning with their pets, to catch grasshoppers for them and to teach their pets new songs.

Intermittent Grandeur.

In an aristocratic Virginia town where the spirit has long outlived the letter of social grandeur, and where in the scarcity of servants any respectable colored person of any age may be employed, some callers were received at the front door by an ample negress of the 'mammy' type. Greeting them, she apologized: 'You ladies must 'sense me for coming to the door, but the butler's gone to school.'—Harper's Magazine.

Value of Publicity.

'Do you think your opponent has a chance in the coming election?' 'No,' replied Senator Sorghum; 'and he doesn't think so, either. He accepted the nomination merely for the sake of the advertising.'

Lao-tze Wrote Gospel of Taoism. Lao-tze wrote the gospel of Taoism, from whose pages an immense religion grew up. Having been librarian of a Chinese king, and having much time for meditation, he came after many years to the conclusion that humility was the supreme virtue. He resigned, and desired to hide in seclusion. While passing through the gate of the palace on his way to solitude the warder besought him: 'You are about to withdraw yourself from the world. I pray you write me a book before you go.' Lao-tze thereupon sat down and wrote a book about half the size of St. Mark's gospel. He gave this to the warder, passed through the gate and no man knows where he died. The little book is the gospel of Taoism. The word 'Tao' means way—man of destiny. The advice was that men should become like little children and act without reflection.

Insurance to Make Sure. No one will deny the importance of up-to-date fire fighting apparatus. The efficiency of our fire department must always be maintained. But after all is done in the way of preparation for fire fighting, there is a very large element of 'luck' in the results, when it comes to a real test. In the Astoria conflagration, the fire loss was greatly increased by high winds and bursting water mains; when the Washington High School building burned a few weeks ago, a sweeping fire would probably have destroyed a large section of Portland, if it had not been for a little rain that came just in time to protect this property. It is never safe to depend upon 'luck' for the protection of your property, when you can get INSURANCE THAT WILL MAKE YOU SURE. Call us today.
