JULY 6.

A LAMP AND A LIGHT:—Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path.—Psalm 119:105.

THE CELEBRATION

The celebration staged July 3 and 4, will go down in history as one of the most successful public events ever staged in Ashland. Not only did the event meet the expectations of its sponsors but it satisfied the demands of our guests, and great satisfaction is being generally expressed with the excellent entertainment afforded.

All the credit for the more than successful celebration is not due any individual nor any single organization of the city, for it is not amiss to say that the event was the result of the combined efforts of Ashland's citizens. However, one organization of the city stands out pre-eminently in the excellent service rendered: the Lithians. That organization conceived the plans, carried on an extensive advertising campaign and took the lead in executing every detail of the program.

CONVICTION IS JUSTIFIED

A jury in circuit court has convicted George Hurst, Curry county resident of involuntary manslaughter for killing his companion, whom he mistook for a deer. Sentence will be passed by Judge Kendell during the coming week.

The convict of the Curry county man should form a gentle reminder to the would be sportsmen who flock to the woods in deer season and out and bang away at the first object they see or in the direction from which the slightest noise emanates. Southern Oregon and coast counties have an undesirable reputation because of the frequent killing of men, who are mistaken for deer, and it is high time that radical steps be adopted to bring an end to the useless and unjustified slaughter.

It is to be hoped, in the interest of human life, that in the future, Hurst's kind will be convicted and given the maximum sentence.

TIME FOR A CHANCE

With but one exception no criticism can be directed towards the recent celebration, but that single exception is a matter of importance and one that will have a lot to do with the future success of celebrations. The Tidings voices the sentiment of ninety out of every one hundred Ashland citizens in asserting that the shooting of firecrackers and other explosives is entirely out of place and a constant menace to life and property. The throwing of firecrackers and torpedoes under the feet of women and little children is a dangerous practice and can afford no amusement only for those who throw the misseis. That people were not severely injured during the celebration July 3 and 4 is short of being a miracle.

Eliminating the danger that may result to human life, the fire hazard alone will justify whatever action may be necessary in prohibiting the use of firecrackers and other explosives within the city limits.

In case of the firecracker sentiment and judgment are at variance. A few seem to think it impossible to celebrate without the use of them, and to those who hold that view it should be sufficient to call their attention to the fact that with but very few exceptions towns of the country have banned the practice. Ashland needs to do the same. Sentiment fostered because of the long association of firecrackers with the Fourth of July, must not be permitted to over-rule judgment. Loss of life and property must be prohibited.

THE ALBANY JAIL BREAK

There ought to be no escape for the men who murdered the late Sheriff Dunlap of Linn county.

No fine-spun ideas of sympathy should make them immune from punishment. They showed no mercy to Will Dunlap. They were not entitled to special freedom in the jail corridor at Albany, a freedom that seems to account for the escape of Johnson and the near escape of Parker, who fired the brutal death shot at the sheriff.

A mere arrest of the two men for the theft of an automobile was not their real reason for the desperate alternative to which they resorted. A brief period in jail for that offense was not the thought in their minds when they turned on Dunlap. In the background were the things they had done before, things they did not want to face through the exposure of court proceedings and a jail sentence.

All they have done has not been brought to light. Their cruel and wanton murder of the Linn county sheriff makes that clear.

Johnson should be captured and be made to face the consequences of his crime. Men who kill without excuse, as they did, have no right to be at liberty among the decent people of the earth.—Oregon Daily Journal

J. H. Fuller, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and the Lithians, is the right man in the right place. Mr. Fuller has the interests of Ashland at heart and his excellent service to the town and community are not to be judged with the salary he receives in his official position. Were the Chamber of Commerce able to pay it, John Fuller's services would justify a greatly increased salary.

Go where you will and when you will, you will never find a crowd of several thousand people where better behavior prevailed than during the two-day celebration in Ashland. The decorum of the crowd is one of the features of the event and is a matter of pride, not only to Ashland, but to the districts from which the visitors came.

Canada proposes to give Dr. Banting, discoverer of insulin, $7,500 a year for life, so he may be enabled to devote all his time to further research. That's a wise idea. Such men are very rare, and the value of the cure for diabetes he has given the world could not be estimated in terms of even millions of dollars.

A spirited advertising campaign will prevent dog days entering into the volume of business of the average firm. There is no dull season with the consistent advertiser.

An exchange tells us that the skeleton of Aside from its originality it would prove a unearthed, which prompted someone to say that scientists are as good at guessing as some of the other professions.

Now that a better celebration has been successfully staged let us direct our attention to something that will strengthen Ashland's commercial position.

An exchange says that France controls everything in the Ruhr, but the situation.

Ten thousand people entered Lithia Park during the celebration, and just that number praised the beauties of it.

Daily News Letter

LONDON, July 6.—Will M. Raymond Poincare prove an insurmountable barrier to the success of Stanley Baldwin, Prime Minister of Great Britain?

Political circles are debating this question. Many hold that Poincare was the obstacle over which Lloyd George stubbed his toe out of Downing street, and the rock in the unfortunate attempt of Bonar Law to tread a path of "peace and tranquillity."

Anglo-French relations are important to Great Britain. With France across the narrow English Channel, within easy striking distance of English shores, it is important that there be an Anglo-French accord. Statesmen who can't agree with France or who can't persuade France to agree with Great Britain have troubled times.

M. Poincare has been rather disinclined to pay much respect to the British views and wishes since he took office, and every fortnight or so the English press has announced that the Anglo-French entente is threatened.

Bonar Law sought to temporize with the French Premier, and he was forced by worry and ill health to give up the office. Now comes Stanley Baldwin to lock horns with the statesman from across the Channel. He seems to have two courses open to him—either to accept or disregard the dictates of M. Poincare. There certainly are no signs that Poincare has any intention of being persuaded out of his stiff stand upon the reparations problem.

Until that is settled no British Prime Minister will have clear sailing. Since Poincare is so vital a factor in the whole reparations problem there is great conjecture as to how Stanley Baldwin will deal with him. If he doesn't deal with him, or perhaps without him, then his tenure of office is threatened.

Exclusive Troon—that's what the American golfers thought of it.

The American golfers appeared at Troon to practice for the British Open Championships three weeks before the tournament opened. Every day they were witnessed, as they started off the first tee, by silent, impassive members of the Troon Club, sitting behind a plate glass front. Never once were they invited inside the clubhouse. The answer is that they were professional players, and even in Scotland it seems that a professional player is not the social equal of a club member, and clubs can't be contaminated by the presence of professionals within their portals. Exclusive Troon is right.

At last British gastronomic tastes have been changed. The British have been advertised into a taste for ice cream. Taking a leaf from the American book, the chain restaurants owned by Lyons & Company, opened an ice cream factory. A year ago this factory, under American management, turned out 500 pints of ice cream a week and almost had to force it down the British throat. Advertising was restored to, and now Londoners are consuming 10,000 gallons of ice cream a week and demanding more. Perhaps even Mr. Wrigley's product may yet become popular in England.

"The Workers' Dreadnought," edited by Sylvia Pankhurst and described as an "ultra-Communist" periodical, is apparently displeased with the trend of events in Moscow.

A recent issue contains an article on conditions in Moscow which breathes discontent because the days of undiluted Bolshevism appear to be passing.

"The economic screw is being put on the townspeople more and more," the paper complains. "The free rations, clothing and fuel of the early days after the revolution are gone."

NOTED AUTHOR WILL ATTEND JEWISH MEET

NEW YORK, July 6.—Israel Zangwill, novelist, playwright and essayist, has cabled Nathan Straus, president of the American Jewish Congress, that he will come to America to attend the next session of the Congress, to be held October 14, at a city to be later designated.

Zangwill is coming, after an absence of twelve years, for the sole purpose of making the principal address before the congress. In it he will review the present situation of Jews throughout the world and will outline the work still to be done for the protection of the rights of the Jews of Eastern Europe, in addition to exposing the character of the anti-Semitic attacks made against Jews in this country and Europe.

The noted writer visited America twelve years ago for the premiere of his play, "The Melting Pot," at Washington. The late Theodore Roosevelt, then President, and members of his Cabinet were among the guests. The play was dedicated to Roosevelt. Zangwill was one of the chief supporters of the late Theodore Herzl, author of the modern Zionist movement, and was also one of the leaders in establishing the Jewish Territorial Organization, which has provided refuges for homeless Jews. He has dealt extensively with the status of the Jew abroad in his books, "The War for the World," and "The Voice from Jerusalem," while his drama, "The War God," sounds a universal note.

The date of Zangwill's arrival will be announced by Bernard G. Richards, executive secretary of the American Jewish Congress.

Start on Trip—G. A. Gillette and family left recently on a summer excursion to the Lake of the Woods and Crater Lake. They plan on making the trip by way of Fort Klamath. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Boyle of San Francisco, who have been visiting them.

DIRECTORS ELECTED BY PSYCHOLOGY CLUB

The Southern Oregon society of Applied Psychology met Thursday evening in Pioneer hall and elected the following board of directors: Dr. J. B. Webster, Milton C. Reid, R. E. Banks, W. H. Mowat, Mrs. Inez F. Morton, M. C. Reed and Dr. Mattie Shaw.

Miss Blanche Hicks invited the society to meet in the library rooms and offered her services in getting any and all literature obtainable from the libraries. The society accepted the generous invitation and unanimously elected Miss Hicks to membership.

The next meeting will be at the library, Thursday 12, and the board of directors will furnish the program.
