PERSONAL SELF GOVERNMENT:—He that hath no rule over his own spirit is like a city that is broken down, and without walls.—Proverbs 25:28.

DEVELOPING SOUTHERN OREGON

The meeting held at Crater Lake Sunday was representative of the commercial organizations and towns of Southern Oregon. The affair was more than a picnic for the reason that consideration was directed to questions pertaining to the development of Southern Oregon as a whole. The occasion brought together men who are able to render valuable assistance in a general program of development, and it is hoped that Sunday's meeting will not be the last.

Southern Oregon needs more get-together meetings and functions that will serve to make the people of the various towns rub elbows and realize that there is good in every community of the district. It is evident that sectionalism often runs rampant to the detriment of the southern part of the state as a whole. It is necessary that the advantages of each and every district be recognized and that each district be considered in a program of general improvement. As factional fights retard the growth of towns, so does factionalism and petty strife between towns retard the growth and development of any geographical section of the state.

Southern Oregon is a vast empire of wealth, of which every community forms a part. There is room for marked development in each of the districts of which it is composed, and there are many projects that can be developed in common that will result to the general good of all. If the population and wealth of Southern Oregon as a whole can be doubled each district will share in that growth and prosperity.

CONGRATULATIONS PORTLAND

Portland papers announce that the $300,000,000 fund for the development of Oregon has been subscribed in full. The successful culmination of the movement marks Portland as not only a progressive city, but one interested in the development of Oregon.

People, generally, will better appreciate Portland's spirit when they understand that the entire fund is to be used in developing industries in the state outside of Portland. Plans for the expenditure of the $300,000,000 fund have as yet not been formulated but it is understood that it will be directed to not only developing new and growing industries but that much of it will be expended in bettering marketing conditions for agricultural classes, a thing that is greatly needed in the state.

The committee, which will have supervision of the work and the expenditure of the funds, is made up of constructive business men of Portland and the personnel is such that it is evident that they will give Oregon and Portland value received for the money contributed.

In past years people residing in the districts of the southern and eastern portions of the state have been imbued with the opinion that Portland had only Portland's interests at heart and cared nothing for the cow counties and the agricultural and horticultural districts. For most part the impression has been wrong, but Portland's attitude in the $300,000,000 development fund will make a lot of Portland boosters throughout Oregon. It proves beyond any doubt that Portland has the interests of Oregon at heart. Congratulations, Portland.

ANENT OREGON'S DEVELOPMENT

Those who attended the noon forum of the Medford Chamber of Commerce yesterday and listened to A. S. Dudley, who was recently elected secretary of the Oregon Chamber of Commerce, were privileged to hear some excellent suggestions along the line of state development. In view of the fact that the speaker has had sufficient experience in his line of work the suggestions are worthy of earnest consideration.

Recognizing Oregon as a state of wonderful resources, unparalleled scenery, equable climate, and capable of a vast development, with its varied resources and advantages distributed throughout every section, the speaker urged development from the standpoint of the state as a whole. Putting it another way, he advised that first consideration be given to advertising and developing Oregon as a state, without thought of community or geographical districts. His thought is to attract people to Oregon, leaving the matter of location to those who come. His principal reason for the plan of action is that the average small town and community is incapable, particularly through lack of funds, of attracting desirable people, or of carrying on effective publicity campaigns. His plan is to consolidate finances for advertising and exploitation in a single fund of sufficient volume that will assure results, leaving the various towns and communities the work of beautifying their respective districts and making other improvements that will attract and hold the home-seeker after he has been induced to cast his lot in Oregon. It means centralizing the work of advertising and colonization.

Another commendable thought presented by the speaker is that of carrying on a publicity campaign in a dignified manner, giving due consideration to advantages possessed by other states, and being careful to present local advantages in a conservative manner, eliminating entirely exaggeration and doubtful methods in winning new settlers.

Another feature of development suggested is that of providing better markets for Oregon grown products and to that end, Secretary Dudley urged every individual who produces any article for the market to exercise care as to the manner in which the article is prepared for the public. He urged that special attention be given to matter of preparation and to containers, sanitation, uniform grades, and all other details that creates a growing demand for products. His plan is to make Oregon products desirable in every market.

Perhaps the most important of all points touched by the speaker was that of attracting only those to whom we have something to offer, exercising care to win only those who can better their present conditions and who in turn will benefit Oregon.

There is every indication that the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce will soon be working along constructive lines, and it is also apparent that the secretary of the important organization is of sufficient calibre to give Oregon the results that have long been desired. One thing is required, however, if the highest degree of success is attained, and that is support and unity on the part of the various districts of Oregon. Let every community join in putting over a campaign that in the end will assure the greatest era of development in the history of the state.

TIDINGS CIRCULATION GROWS

The circulation of the Tidings has been enjoying an unprecedented growth for the past several weeks, a fact we note with pleasure, but not with pride. The result indicates that the people of Ashland and adjacent territory are appreciative of the efforts exerted by the paper in giving to them a medium that reflects their interests as they deserve to be.

In connection with the growth in circulation it is safe to predict that within a comparatively short time the Tidings will become a regular visitor in nearly every home in Ashland's trade territory. To accomplish this is the aim of the management and entire force. More, it is the desire to improve and enlarge the Tidings at every opportunity, but in this connection it is only fair to say that future growth and development depends a great deal on the volume of business accorded the paper. An earnest desire exists to keep pace with our field, and as the field develops so will the Tidings.

Ashland citizens join in unison in extending congratulations and wishes for unbounded success to Irving E. Vining, newly elected president of the State Chamber of Commerce. His selection is just recognition of his abilities, and we hope that pardon will be granted for taking pride in the fact that he is an Ashland citizen.

Ashland was well represented at the picnic of Southern Oregon towns held Sunday at Crater Lake. Not a few local people went out of their way to make the trip and help represent their community, for which they have the thanks of those who remained at home.

Daily News Letter

PARIS, Aug. 23.—France's "cuisine" is dying for want of chefs and chefs' assistants. The rate of pay is so low that French chefs are constantly being persuaded by dollar salaries to go to the United States. Working conditions are such that young men of "taste" no longer enter the business.

Already the gourmands are lamenting the disappearance of quality food and the invasion of hitherto tabooed canning factory products into the French kitchens. So serious is the labor shortage in the cooking business that it was the chief subject discussed at the recent Hotel Proprietors' Congress held at Blois.

"The trouble is the average French chef is receiving approximately the same salary today he received forty years ago," explains M. Sale, secretary general of the "Cooks' Syndicate," of Paris. Meanwhile he daily sees the food he prepares at almost the same expense as ten years ago selling in the dining room at four or five times previous prices.

Chefs in leading Paris restaurants are paid $45 to $55 a month their assistants one-third to one-half as much. They work usually in sub-basements so hot and disagreeable their health is permanently impaired. Working hours are from 9 to 14 hours per days, usually divided into two shifts. The shortage is being felt not only in Paris but in the provinces. Everywhere there is lamentation, for good food is as necessary to the Frenchman as side-salon lunch-rooms are to Americans.

On the contrary, the wine industry is showing too much prosperity. More good wine is being produced than can be comfortably consumed. French wine-drinking habits are very regular. The daily wine consumption of an average Frenchman never varies more than a few swallows. He can estimate on January 1, how much "wet" stock he will require for the year and drink from the last bottle on December 31.

Consequently, although recent wine seasons have been the best ever and the storage caves are overflowing the consumption is not holding its own with production. American prohibition cut off a big export outlet; the Austrians are too poor to drink French wines; the Germans condemn everything French, and the English are faithful to their whiskey, soda and tea.

The government considered shutting the trade door to foreign wines to encourage patriotic drinking. Spain threatened to boycott French wines by way of reprisal. Officials investigated and learned that for every bottle of port or Madeira coming from Spain, France sent into Spain champagne, Bordeaux and Burgundy by the case and that the figures were approximately the same between France and all other wine-producing countries. So the wine remains and accumulates, awaiting patriotism, inspired drinking or possible "bootleg" entry into the United States.

The campaign for patriotic drinking has already started, with newspaper articles refuting contentions, evidently emanating from America, that wine drinking leads to alcoholism.

WATCH DIGESTION IN SUMMER

Too much ice cream, pie salads, pickles and cold drinks during the hot weather causes indigestion. Coated or furred tongue, bad breath, and sour or feverish stomach are symptoms of this malady that can be corrected with Foley Cathartic Tablets. "I had stomach trouble and tried Foley Cathartic Tablets. They gave quick relief and now I can eat anything," writes J. Osborn, Lucasville, Ohio. A wholesome physic that sweetens the stomach, tones the liver and cleanses the bowels. Sold everywhere.

MANAGER SELECTED FOR STATE PROGRAM

CHEHALIS, Wash., Aug. 23.—D. O. Lively, formerly connected with Swift and company in Portland, has been appointed by N. B. Coffman, president of the Washington State Chamber of Commerce, as manager of a development and education program which the chamber will conduct throughout the state. Plans are being formulated to use about $300,000 in the state during the coming three years. Lively is well known in the west. He has organized livestock and other agricultural organizations in Portland and San Francisco and was director of the third and fourth Liberty loans in the agricultural division for the 12th federal reserve district.

SOCIETY

MRS. GRACE E. ANDREWS, Editor Phone items to her at 345-R, between 10 A. M. and 2 P. M. and evenings.

Back from Yellowstone—Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lay returned to Ashland this week to spend a few days prior to their return to their home in Los Angeles. It will be remembered that Mr. and Mrs. Lay spent some time earlier in the summer, camping in the Park and visiting relatives in the city.

At the time that Miss Fifield, with her aunt, Mrs. Meldoon, started on their eastern trip, the Lays drove north to visit in Portland and Tacoma, when they did; going on to Yellowstone Park together. After a beautiful experience in viewing the grandeur of nature's wonderland, the Lays returned to Ashland—the others of the party going on to their objective, Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. Lay are guests at the F. H. Shaw home on El-kader street. They are relatives of the Fifield and Shaw families and added to the pleasure of the visit with relatives has been the enjoyment they have had in Ashland's Lithia Park.

A Pleasant Surprise—Miss Lois Newell, of Vancouver, Washington, surprised her father most happily, last week by driving down to spend a few days with him here in Ashland. Miss Newell had not seen her father for a number of years, for she had been in the east with her grandparents, attending school. Her present plan is to come to Ashland, before very long, to make her home with her father.

A Delightful Week-end—Two cars, filled with a bevy of light-hearted girls, intent on forgetting the work-a-day-every-day things, motored out Saturday to spend the week end at Ashland's lovely Lake of the Woods. The party had two cottages at their disposal; Miss Coffee's and the Stock family cottage and they (the eleven) divided themselves as nearly even as may be, between the two.

All sorts of good things had been taken with them to provide for the picnic appetites; it goes without saying that ample justice was awarded all culinary results. Every jolly thing was done that belongs to a happy outing; bonfires, the toasting of marshmallows, song and story added charm.

The more strenuous things claimed a share of their attention too. They sampled all the kinds of fun Lake of the Woods habitues recommend for the joy of the occasional visitor. They assuredly filled the hours with pleasant experiences and the memory pictures hung, will be unshaded. Those who had this happy outing were; the Misses Ruth Osburn, Gladys Applegate, Alleen Walker, Leta Walker, Calla Biegel, Alice Walker, Georgia Coffee, Pearl Wilshire, Elsie Alexander, Helene Biede, and Gertrude Biede.

Guests at Mrs. McCarthy's—Mrs. Chalmers Strange, from Portland, arrived Sunday to visit her aunt, Mrs. Anna McCarthy on North Main street. She will also visit in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Neil.

Mrs. Strange will remain some time in Ashland, the guest of her relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McKnight, also of Portland, have but just arrived and will be house guests at Mrs. McCarthy's as well. The McKnights have been touring Southern Oregon and spent a few days at Crater Lake. They came from there to Ashland, and will remain as guests of Mrs. McCarthy for awhile.

The families are very old friends and they are anticipating a great deal of pleasure from the visit.

Convalescing—From a letter received from Mrs. Addis friends have learned that her son, Glenn Addis, is out of the hospital in Portland, but is far from well. He is with relatives in Salem. Mrs. Addis writes from the ranch at Richreall, Oregon.

Their future plans depend upon Mr. Addis' complete recovery and are rather unsettled at present. The Addis' like Ashland very much and are sorry that their return is deferred for the time being, at least.

Visitors from Hollywood—Mr. and Mrs. Guy Stone, who were formerly very well known residents of Ashland, but who have lived for some years in Los Angeles, are in the city renewing old friendships. They note many new faces and many changes in Ashland. Mrs. Stone was formerly Miss Jessie Grant, a popular teacher, who held a position in the city

RHEUMATISM LEAVES YOU FOREVER

Deep Seated Uric Acid Deposits Are Dissolved and the Rheumatic Poison Starts to Leave the System Within Twenty-four Hours. Every Druggist in this country is authorized to say to every rheumatic sufferer that if a full pint bottle of Allenru, the sure conqueror of rheumatism, does not show the way to stop the agony, reduce swollen joints and do away with even the slightest twinge of rheumatic pain, he will gladly return your money without comment. Allenru has been tried and tested for years, and really marvelous results have been accomplished in the most severe cases where the suffering and agony was intense and piteous and where the patient was helpless. Mr. James H. Allen, the discoverer of Allenru, who for many years suffered the torments of acute rheumatism, desires all sufferers to know that he does not want a cent of anyone's money unless Allenru decisively conquers this worst of all diseases, and he has instructed druggists to guarantee it as above in every instance. ey entertained the members of the Beaver and Herndon families at their country home, at a most elaborate picnic dinner. All the deliciously satisfying things provided, were given full justice by the many guests, and the afternoon and evening were spent with the gracious host and hostess. The special guests in compliment to whom the dinner was given, were Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Stannard of Los Angeles, and Mr. Meredith Beaver of Portland. Mrs. Stannard was formerly Miss Nellie Beaver, and was a popular young teacher in our schools. Mr. Stannard is a teacher in the Van Nuy's H. S. in Los Angeles, where the young people live.

Meredith Beaver, as will be recalled, graduated from the U. of O. two years ago, and is now taking advanced work at the Portland Medical college. The young folks are having a most happy visit with home folks and their hosts of friends.

"Perfect Number" Entertained—"The 'Mysterious Seven'" whose organization's appellation may not be divulged, except to the initiated, had their weekly "Swimming Whizz" at Holman's Baths, Wednesday of this week. After a perfectly jolly time, the party adjourned to "Green Meadow Lodge," where the young hostesses had arranged everything most felicitously—the motif in decoration and refreshments being the rose, an augury, it is hoped, of the future of these young girls; a rose-hued vision and rose-strewn pathway.

Announcement is made of the marriage at Jacksonville of Mr. Virgil Hawley of Ashland and Miss Claire Mason of Central Point. Both young people are well-known in Ashland. Mrs. Hawley lived here prior to her going to Central Point. She will be remembered as an artist of unusual ability, demonstrating marked talent in both drawing and painting. Mr. Hawley has lived in Ashland for years—a son of Mr. V. V. Hawley, of Walker avenue. He was a soldier in the World War and saw eighteen month's service in France. Since then, until more recently, his work was out at Hyatt Prairie Dam.

Although known to relatives, Mr. Hawley's marriage came as a complete surprise to friends outside the family. The good wishes of a host of friends are theirs for a happy and prosperous life. Mr. and Mrs. Hawley are spending a few days at the home of Mr. Hawley's father, Mr. V. V. Hawley, then the young folks plan to take a trip to the coast.

Miss Jones Entertains—Wednesday evening, Miss Dorothy Jones entertained a number of her girl friends at her home on Mountain avenue. The party was planned to be just a cozy little gathering of girlhood friends, at which pleasant memories would be recalled, and happy experiences would be re-lived while fingers, perhaps, would be employed in dainty needle-work, or music would entertain the hours. Future plans came in for a share of attention, too; since the hostess is a young bride-elect and the host was a bit of looking ahead, as well as the reminiscent vein. The friends who helped to make the happy evening were: the Misses Esther Kleinhammer, Margaret Van Dyke, Virginia Jones, Marjorie Gillette, Alleen Walker, Agnes Hedberg, Alice Pool, Bernice Meyer, Harriet Hodges, Marguerite Hammond, the Mesdames Lynn Slack, Milton Fraley, Gerald Wenner, Earl Fraley, Domino Provost and Nathan Gale.

Before goodnights were spoken, most dainty and delicious refreshments were served by the young hostess, assisted by her mother and sister.

A Family Dinner Party—"Encanto Heights," truly the "Enchanted Hills," was the scene of a delightful family reunion Sunday, when Mr. and Mrs. Yock-
