Health Hints by the Father of Physical Culture

Vitality first of all means endurance and the ability to live long. It naturally indicates functional and organic vigor. You cannot be vital unless the organs of the body are possessed of at least a normal degree of strength and are performing their functions harmoniously and satisfactorily. To be vital means that you are full of vim and energy, that you possess that enviable characteristic known as vivacity. It means that you are vibrating, pulsating with life in all its most attractive forms. For life, energy, vitality—call it what you wish—in all its manifestations, will always be found attractive. No one belittles the importance of success. Everyone is guided to a large extent by the desire to succeed. The emotions and instincts that come to one when thoroughly developed, with the vital forces surging within, are decidedly different from those which influence one when lacking in stamina. Many who have grown beyond adult age are still undeveloped, so far as physical condition and vigor is concerned, and this lack of physical development or vitality means immaturity—incompleteness. It means that one is short on manhood or womanhood. This statement, that one's personality, under such circumstances, is not completely brought out, may seem strange to some; but careful reasoning will soon verify its accuracy. Success of the right sort, therefore, depends first of all upon intelligent efforts that are guided day after day, with a view, first of all to developing the physical organism to the highest possible standard, and maintaining it there. In other words, it is our first duty to be men, strong and splendid, or women, healthy and perfect, if we are desirous of securing life's most gratifying prizes. Many actually go through life only half alive. They are, to a certain extent, doped by their physical deficiencies. They have been handicapped by a lack of the energy that comes with physical development. They need to be stirred by the regular use of the physical powers of the body. When the body is complete in all of its various parts it is truly a marvelous organism. Throbbing vitality stirs the imagination, gives one courage and capacity, thrills one with the possibilities of life, fires the ambitions. The efforts involved in one's daily duties, be they ever so important, then become mere play. To such a man inactivity is impossible. Every day must be filled with active, interesting duties, and the progress in such cases is inevitable. Such a man grows, he improves, he ascends. He becomes a positive dominating force in the world. Can pulsating, vibrating, vitality of this kind be developed? The answers will be found in the daily Health Hints I am publishing.

Save His Money.

An Irishman boarded a car the other day, but after a word with the conductor made for the door again.

An inspector who happened to be on the car said to him: "Surely you don't want to get off again so soon, and besides, you haven't paid your fare."

"Oh want to go to Southern street," said the Irishman, "an' the conductor says there ain't no such place."

"Well, there isn't," answered the inspector.

"Then, faith, an' p'what's the good of going there, then?"

One More Look.

On our return to the locker room a young woman with one shoe and stockings on was distractedly going from locker to locker and finally appealed to us.

"Has any one an extra stocking in her locker?"

"Not in mine," we answered after searching our lockers in turn. Imagine my embarrassment when I found the missing stocking in my bag. —Chicago Tribune.

DISEASE TERRORS PASSING. Theory Advanced That Germ Species May Die Out as Did Mammoths and Dinosaurs. Is it not likely, speaking as a layman and without medical erudition, that germ species originate, grow to maturity, then pass on to senility and die out, like so many families of creatures have done on this earth? The last Methuselahs of certain diseases may now be moving on to oblivion. Did not the mammoths and the dinosaurs rise, flourish and disappear? Then why not the microscopic terrors that menace mankind?

Why Worry. "Serenity of mind is the most valuable asset of the present age," declared Senator Lodge of Massachusetts recently. "It is the only way to keep young, the only way to preserve health and, while we laugh at the maid Sarah, we really should envy her."

"Sarah had just resigned her position to get married and when her mistress learned that she was shortly to go to Canada and make her home there, she asked: "But Sarah, aren't you rather nervous about going into a strange country like that?"

"No, madam," answered the girl. "That's my husband's lookout. I belong to him, and if anything happens to me it'll be his loss, not mine."
