Unemployment is bringing an almost unseen change about in England, most unusual and picturesque deand there are many who feel that the decline of the British na- sign. tion is beginning unless unemployment is checked. Certainly England's industrial efficiency is being daily decreased though unemployment. Look at these figures:

1,211,900 people are drawing unemployment benefits. 72,839 persons are working on short time.

500,000 are workless and not drawing unemployment.

800,000 youths are out of school who have never had work.

These figures tell a story that may be fateful to British industry. Men who have walked the streets for months without turn to her home in Ashland was work are becoming broken in spirit, and what's worse are be- chronicled in a recent issue had a coming physically and mentally inefficient.
