Gone is the good ol' happy hobo and in his place comes the detestable bum, according to mission workers here.

The difference, mission workers say, between the hobo and the bum is a very distinct one. The hobo would work occasionally in return for board and lodging, but the bum never.

The hobo was the romantic type of traveler—one who perhaps had been educated, who could recite poetry and loved the life of the open. The bum has no outstanding qualities of redemption. He flees from work like one does from a dreaded disease; he will lie, cheat or steal to get out of doing a job. Instead of doing a little work in return for any benefactions he will flee from sight at the first chance. Mission workers long for the return of the hobo and the extinction of the bum.

Natural gas is now being used as a fuel to generate electricity by public utility companies in 14 states. The consumption of gas for this purpose during 1922 averaged 74,000,000 cubic feet a day. It produced approximately 5,500,000 kilowatt hours of electric energy. This amount of electric current would keep all of the 7,000,000 electric irons in daily use in the United States hot enough for ironing for at least three hours were they all connected to the natural gas-fired electric generating stations at the same time.

LONE HAWAIIAN ISLE IS SCENE OF GRIPPING TALE

HONOLULU, Hawaii, Oct. 24.—Kalalau Valley, on the Island of Kauai, made famous thirty years ago by the leper, Koolau, who fought off the soldiers of the provisional government that came to take him to the settlement of Kalaupapa, Molokai, is one of the most lonely and at the same time one of the most romantic spots in the Hawaiian Islands.

Persons who have read Jack London's "House of Pride" will recall the gripping tale of Koolau; of how this leper, refusing to give himself up as the other lepers had decided to do, fled with his wife and small son to the upper fastnesses of the valley and, with three rifles and a good supply of ammunition, kept guard over the narrow defile that was the only approach to the cave where they had taken refuge. One deputy sheriff and three soldiers who refused to take Koolau's warning not to attempt this ridge paid for their daring with their lives. Later a field piece was brought in and an attempt made to blow the hiding place to pieces but without success. Finally the hunt was given up. Koolau remained in the valley, but died several years later of tuberculosis.

Bounded by Cliffs Kalalau Valley faces the sea, with a broad beach of yellow sand. Its sides are hemmed in by precipitous cliffs which rise thousands of feet into the rain clouds. The only means of entrance to the valley at the present time—the old Hawaiians knew a trail up the cliffs—is to anchor outside the breakers and "surf in" by small boats to the beach, or to take a narrow and dangerous footpath more than ten miles in length which follows the cliffs along the rocky Napali coast.

The valley is wholly deserted of human inhabitants. Thirty years ago it held hundreds of Hawaiian families, and its wide area boasted a maze of taro patches, irrigated by water brought down from the heights by an ingenious system of ditches. Today the taro patches are overgrown with brush and weeds, and the native fruit trees—bananas and papayas—have gone wild and scraggly. Wild goats roam the valley in hundreds, and at night wild dogs and cats, the remnants of former days, may be heard skulking about the campfire of the traveler who has ventured in from the outside world.

Close up against a cliff, hidden by the lantana bushes, may still be found the ruins of an old grass hut, and nearby the rotted prow of an old fishing canoe.

Seek Cure Now But with this change which has come to Kalalau Valley there has come also a change in the manner with which lepers in the islands regard the settlement of Molokai. No longer is it considered by them as a place of permanent imprisonment, as in the days of Koolau, but now rather as a great open-air hospital, where those who come in the early stages of the disease have an excellent chance to regain their health.

This is the result of the splendid care which the Territorial Government gives the lepers at Molokai: good food, good houses and the wonderful chaulmoogra oil treatment which has worked such marvelous cures. Instead of hiding out, as in the old days, the natives who find themselves afflicted with the disease report to the health authorities and ask for treatment. Besides being an excellent thing for the patient, this also works as a benefit to the community whence he comes, as it does away with the possibility of his friends and relatives contracting the disease from him.

KILLING IF GAME WARDEN GIVEN INVESTIGATION

REDDING, Oct. 24.—The Shasta County Grand Jury today is continuing the investigation started Monday into the slaying of Deputy Fish and Game Commissioner James S. White by Federal Prohibition John Vall in Castella last Wednesday.

Witnesses to the shooting were called at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and included Jack Mattos, Ira P. Engle, George Costa, Lloyd Martin, J. F. Hughes, Michael Piduola, Charles George and W. B. Scott. All were in or near the room where the shooting occurred. Additional subpoenas were issued yesterday afternoon.

TWO SUSPECTS HELD FOR ROBBERY OF WEED HOME

WEED, Oct. 23.—Two young men, giving the names of Fleming and Neylon, were arrested at a hotel Monday on the charge of having burglarized on Sunday a house occupied by three teachers. The stolen property was all recovered in their rooms, as well as a watch they are alleged to have stolen from another guest of the hotel.

The pair drove into Weed on Friday, sold their car, which was in bad order, and got a room at the hotel. The authorities now are trying to ascertain if the car was stolen. Fleming and Neylon were taken to the county jail at Yreka.

Daily News Letter

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 24.—Enthusiastic Republicans, eager to have Missouri play a prominent role in the next presidential campaign, have organized a Coolidge-Hyde movement, which is gaining strength in this state.

Under the leadership of prominent members of the party in Missouri they plan to push Governor Arthur M. Hyde as a running mate to President Coolidge, whom the Missourians would back for president for the next regular term.

"Candidacy of Governor Hyde for the Vice-Presidency would give Missouri Republicans something to rally around," declare local Republicans who are instrumental in organizing the movement.

Missouri is generally regarded as a Democratic state, but, contend backers of the proposed Coolidge-Hyde combine, "every time the voters of this state are properly aroused" it has gone Republican.

R. R. Brewster, Republican nominee for United States senator at the last election and one of the leaders of the party in this state, took an important part in the formation of the combination. In an address before the Twentieth Century Republican Club, Brewster was frequently interrupted with outbursts of applause whenever he made mention of the two men as the standard bearers of the party at the next election.

Support has been received by women voters in the movement. Mrs. George W. Davis, member of the club and head of the Christian citizenship department of the Women's Christian-Temperance Union, urged the women voters to get behind Governor Hyde for the vice-presidency, while Mrs. Sylvester Wells, president of the club, was firm in expressing her belief that Coolidge and the Missouri governor would make a winning pair if nominated.

Establishment of a sanitarium in this city to care for drug addicts is taking on a determined and concrete form.

Charles Tucker, president of the Board of Public Welfare, is taking a leading part in urging that such a hospital for the cure of such unfortunate be built.

Tucker plans a civic movement to obtain funds for the establishment of the sanitarium where drug addicts could go voluntarily to be cured, and a clinic where confirmed users could purchase drugs under the strictest supervision. This would eliminate drug peddlers, leaders of the movement declare.
