CITIZENS URGE NEW RESERVOIR

Many Offer Strong Opposition to Developing Emmigrant Creek Project.

Urge Construction of Ninety Million Gallon Reservoir Up Ashland Creek.

With the announcement of the proposal by the city to contract with the Talent Irrigation District for an additional supply of water, to be obtained by the development of the Emmigrant creek unit, there developed immediately no little opposition among many citizens of Ashland. Those opposed to the proposal are citizens who realize, fully, the immediate need of additional water for use within the corporate limits, but are of the opinion that better results will obtain through a complete development of the source in Ashland creek, and from which comes the present supply of water.

Employ Special Engineer To determine the feasibility of securing an additional supply from Ashland creek, Sylvester Patterson and others secured the services of a special engineer who has made a careful investigation of that source. The investigation was completed some time ago, and opponents of the Emmigrant creek proposal announce that the water problem can be solved by the construction of a new and larger reservoir up the creek. Their plans indicate that by the construction of a reservoir, the cost of which will not exceed $100,000, that a supply of 90,000,000 gallons can be stored and held for use during the dry season. Those favoring the Ashland creek project say that a 70-foot dam will be sufficient to store the 90,000,000 gallons, and will cover an area of eight acres.

Character of Dam Required Those favoring the Ashland creek project have also had competent construction engineers on the ground and announce that an earthen dam, constructed from the materials at hand, is the character of dam required. They propose to construct the dam with a core in the center and make a complete lining of concrete. They give out the information that a number of contractors are ready to accept a contract to complete the reservoir at a cost not exceeding $100,000.

Maintenance Cost Low Backers of Ashland creek are firm in their conviction that the reservoir can be constructed and maintained at considerable less expense than the supply can be obtained from Emmigrant creek. They argue that the annual maintenance cost will not exceed, on an average, $250.00 a year, whereas the maintenance cost of the other project will not be less than $1500 a year. Relative to the maintenance of the reservoir, Mr. Patterson says: "The only items of expense connected with the upkeep of the reservoir would be the flushing and the natural repairs."

Say Supply Sufficient Mr. Patterson says that with 90,000,000 million gallons of surplus water there will be a supply sufficient to meet demands during the dry, heretofore restricted, season. "It is claimed that the average consumption during the dry season is 4,000,000 gallons. We will admit that the daily consumption during the dry period is 4,500,000 gallons, or that it requires 1,500,000 gallons more per day to supply requirements during the dry period than ordinarily. Then, with a surplus of 90,000,000 gallons, we could draw from the reservoir, daily, 1,500,000 gallons for a period of 60 days. The amount drawn daily from the surplus, added to the regular supply of 3,000,000 gallons, or a sufficient length of time to meet all requirements during the entire dry period."

When he failed to show up Wednesday night, relatives and friends became alarmed and started a search for him. A wood hauler accidentally came across his body in the field. TRUCKS ARE MOVING HUGE RETORT UP TO OIL SHALE HOLDINGS

The huge 250 ton retort which arrived in Ashland early this week is being moved this afternoon. The Southern Pacific wrecker was on the job after being laid by for repairs and six trucks swung into motion grinding up the long grade leading to the shale holdings. The weight of the entire retort is 60 tons.

The distance of probably a mile from the blacksmith shop to the top of the mountain is being planked and the retort will be transferred from the trucks at this point to wait the completion of the road. The steam shovel which has been used on the Frog Creek hill will be taken to the shale deposits to act as a crane in transferring the machinery from the trucks to platforms. All plans are perfected for the moving and no detrimental factors are hindering their progress. With the present clear weather on hand the syndicate plans to have the retort in motion within 60 days.

Monday, November 12, permitting clerks and owners a holiday in which to observe the anniversary of the signing of the Armistice, which silenced the guns of the World War, Nov. 11, 1918. Medford Will Celebrate The celebration of Armistice day for Jackson county will be held at Medford, various organizations of that city, aided by the American Legion, have prepared a varied and interesting program of sports and races, the crowning event of which will be the annual contest between the football teams of the high schools of Medford and Ashland. This contest is and has been for several years the sporting classic of southern Oregon. This year will prove no exception to the rule and increasing interest is being centered in the coming contest for the football supremacy of southern Oregon. The game will be called at 12:30 promptly and the attendance will probably exceed all former records. Medford Has Edge Although the fortunes of football war have been dragged back and forth between the two teams, Medford apparently has the edge on the coming contest. The statement is based on comparative scores made between the two teams in games with Grants Pass and Klamath Falls. Both last named teams suffered worse at the hands of Medford than with Ashland in this year's contests. However, Ashland is always at her best when the whistle starts them off against Medford and a close contest is predicted. The locals have been put through two weeks of continuous training, being driven until dark during many nights, and will be in excellent condition, however local followers of the game realize that A. H. S. will have to exhibit a better brand of football than in early season games.
