PRAYER FOR TODAY:—O Lord God, I pray thee, send me good speed this day.—Genesis 24:12.

BUILDING TOWNS

One of the greatest hindrances in the growth and development of any town is the selfish spirit exhibited by the individual. No matter how valuable and promising a proposed new industry or improvement may be there is always one or more who immediately begin to acclaim that it will "injure my business." Occasionally a public improvement or a new industry may complete to a slight degree with private business firms in the same town, but if all contemplated improvements are to be knocked for the reason that they may offer slight hindrance to an individual business it is just as well to declare a holiday among all commercial organizations and booster societies. There is no contemplated improvement or new industry that is worth while at all but what will result in greater benefit to the town as a whole than that it can possibly injure some private enterprise. It is a man's duty to look to the welfare of his own business, but it is not becoming any man to throw obstructions in the way of public improvements that are for the benefit of the general public. The individual business man must submerge self and self interests to a degree if the town and community in general are to grow and prosper. Any contemplated public improvement ought to be constructed along lines that will result in the greatest good to the greatest number. No community can advance in the face of selfishness. No town can attain its best stride unless its fellows are willing to submerge personal differences and selfishness and work for the general good.

THE AUTHOR-PEDESTRIAN

Leonard Day, author and adventurer, will arrive in Ashland some time tomorrow forenoon on the last lap of a 10,000 mile trip, which he is making on foot to prove to his publishers the truth of his manuscript, "The Unsolicited Generosity of the American People." Day is walking around the "rim" of the United States, is without funds, asks no man for a meal, a bed, nor anything. He is accepting no rides, as does the average floater making his way along the modern highway. When he is the recipient of a meal he takes that which is set before him. He can not even designate his choice of drinks, as between coffee and tea. He is without a coat and travels bareheaded. Some may say of Day that he is nothing more or less than a fool. Others may say that he is bumming his way and would not succeed were it not for charity. But is Day a fool? Is he an object of charity? No. He is an adventurer, who believes that the average American loves a game sport. The meals and beds accorded the author-pedestrian are not given with a spirit of charity, but in appreciation of his gameness. Day's journey of 10,000 miles, under the almost severe restrictions, is not a task for the weakling. He is proving that he is game to the core. His trip is establishing the fact, beyond any question, that America is unexcelled in its appreciation of one of his nerve. Truly, "the world loves a sport."

THE RISING (?) COST OF EDUCATION

Some persons are becoming very much alarmed over the fact that education is costing more now than it did a few years ago. Of course it is costing more. There are more children in the country; more of them are attending school; the schools have become better in every way. The schools are costing more because the value of the dollar has depreciated. A school costing twice as much per pupil now as in 1913 is in reality costing no more than it did then. In fact the cost of education per pupil in average daily attendance increased only 67.5 per cent from 1913 to 1920. The cost of living increased 100 per cent during this time. Is it fair to assume that when living costs increase, the cost of education must remain stationary? As living costs increase teachers must be paid larger salaries. Fuel is costing more. It costs more to erect and repair school buildings.

Of course the schools are costing more. So are other city, county, and state governmental departments costing more. Isn't it about time the foolish arguments about the increased cost of education cease?

OUR SCHOOL AN ASSET

The public school has perhaps been given limited consideration as a direct monetary asset to a community. Ordinarily we think of the school as a necessity and as affording educational facilities to the young. Comparatively little thought has been given to the powers of the efficient and modern school in drawing new people into the circles of its influence.

Ashland affords one of the best examples of the public school as a monetary asset to the community to be found in Oregon. There are numerous concrete instances proving that the high standard attained by Ashland's school have influenced people from afar to make their homes here. The influence and standards of the local school reach out and beyond the radius attained by the average school. It is a condition that redounds to the credit of Ashland and to those who have had a part in the building of its excellent school system.

A Vancouver, Wash., news dispatch says a man had to give up a house and lots to pay a fine for moonshine charge. That is not the first time a house and lots have paid the cost of that article.

A climate that protects roses and other out-door flowers through November is best appreciated by those not accustomed to it.

If the number of floaters, hoboes and riff-raff hitting the Pacific Highway through Ashland to California is any criterion that state of perpetual summer will most likely have a chill thrown into it before a new year arrives.

Senator Johnson says in his announcement of the presidential nomination that he desires a definite foreign policy. So do we all, Hiram, and the quicker the better. Johnson has been five years in coming to his conclusion.

LOVER SHOTS GIRL; COMMITS SUICIDE

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 21.—Crazed with grief because his sweetheart had discarded him for another, Corydon Jones, 29, 1215 1/2 Q street, last night sent a bullet into the body of Miss Leona Brown of 619 1/2 H Street, when the girl sought to prevent him from shooting Glenn Auten, 515 Thirtieth Street, his successful rival, and then mortally stabbed himself in the breast with a kitchen knife.

Girl Has Chance. Miss Brown, shot in the abdomen, lies at White Hospital, with chances of her recovery held by attending surgeons to be fair.

The double tragedy occurred at the Brown home on H street, across the street from the city jail, and followed a lovers' quarrel that ensued when Auten, with whom Miss Brown had divided her time in recent weeks, called at the Brown home while Jones was present.

MODES FOR PLAYTIME

Fashion's approval of prints extends even to play clothes for the kiddies, and an attractive one-piece bloomer dress is pictured to the left made of figured percale. The three-piece gathered skirt is attached to a square yoke with round neck. The lower parts of the bloomers are gathered into straight bands, made of plain material, to correspond with the facing on the neck and sleeves. Medium size requires 2 1/4 yards 36-inch material. Gingham and chambray are combined in the rompers so attractively pictured. The front and back of the waist and kimono sleeves are cut in one, the closing of the waist being at the back. Applied bands of self-material finish the sleeves and the plain fabric supplies the patch pockets and knee-bands for the lower edges of the rompers. Medium size requires 3/4 yard plain and 1 1/2 yard 36-inch check material.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Suffers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.
