POULTRY SHOW HAS TWO GOOD BOOSTERS

Capt. H. W. Frame and Ernest Webb Have Always Been Consistent Show Supporters.

To Capt. H. W. Frame, of Talent, and Ernest Webb, of Central Point, go the honors for being the most loyal and consistent boosters for the Southern Oregon Poultry Show and Winter Fair. They have been behind both from start to finish, and during the past two or three years have given more of their time and efforts to making the events successful than any one else.

Andy McMillan, Merton Thompson and Everett Smith, of Ashland have developed into real poultry enthusiasts. Millard Grubb has also gone in for some real fancy stuff.

HISTORY OF ASHLAND'S WINTER FAIR

Event Is Out-growth of Southern Oregon Poultry Show.

GROWTH IS RAPID
Poultry Show Is One of Best in Entire State—Exhibits Are Varied.

Four years ago, after having conducted five successive poultry shows, a mere handful of members of the association met in the Library Building at Medford to discuss the prospects of holding the usual annual show. The last show, while indicating increased interest in the rabbit department, had not brought out a good exhibit in the poultry department, and the enthusiasm was at a low ebb, so far as continuing the exhibition was concerned.

Several causes had contributed to the condition, one of the principal being that while the poultry business as a whole had increased remarkably, the fact that the larger breeders, together with a percentage of all poultry owners in the valley engaged in the business, were looking at it purely from the commercial viewpoint, little interest in the fancy or show part of the game made it difficult to obtain an extensive and worthy exhibit.

The time in which to arrange for another show was limited, the association was still in debt to a considerable extent for old coops, and no one appeared willing to assume the responsibility of conducting another show. At that juncture the secretary of the Ashland Chamber of Commerce suggested that, with the consent of the association, he would undertake to assume the responsibility for holding the sixth annual show and would endeavor to make a worth while exhibition. The suggestion was heartily received and warmly approved.

Additions Are Made
Those who attended the Ashland Winter Fair in 1920, held entirely in the Armory, with chickens, rabbits, turkeys, ducks, geese, merchant's booths and demonstration agents, red apples, yellow corn and many other exhibits too numerous to mention will never forget the jollity of the occasion, nor the success of it.

Growth Is Realized
The following year, 1921, it was found that with the advertising obtained for the First Annual Winter Fair that an entire building would be required for the poultry exhibit alone, so the big natorium was secured to house the poultry department. The auto dealers of southern Oregon were invited to augment the other exhibits in the Armory, and that year saw the first automobile exhibit added to the list of attractions.

Many poultry exhibits came in that year from up-state and the capacity of the coops and equipment was tested to the utmost. All the other departments enjoyed a healthy growth and a wonderful exhibit from the schools of Ashland and Jackson county was added.

Wonderful Show in 1922
The year 1922 witnessed the springing of an unlooked-for surprise on the management of the Winter Fair in the receipt of entries in the poultry department from all over the state of Oregon, and from points in Washington and California. A prominent poultry man who was a visitor that year declared the poultry exhibit the second in size in the Northwest, the Portland show, only, exceeding it. And the rabbits. They came in from everywhere and required a large crew of men for an entire day building pens to hold them.

The 1922 Fair was much larger than during any preceding years, but the extra expense incurred in building additional exhibit coops for the poultry department, and the expense entailed in securing the wonderful lecture and entertainment by Frank Branch Riley made the financial success of the show less pronounced than during the previous years.

Auditorium Secured
It had been suggested that Ashland's wonderful auditorium would be an ideal place in which to hold the show and looking to that end eventually, a movement was made in that direction in 1922, but the suggestion was allowed to remain for fulfillment this season, and it now appears that even this great building will be filled to its utmost capacity.

The auditorium is a wonderful building, in area, appearance, and construction, and with the various departments of Art, Agriculture, Automobiles, Domestic Art, Floriculture, Horticulture, Industry,

Poultry, Dairying, Rabbits, together with the merchants' booths arrayed around the entire outer edge, and the decorations portraying a winter scene, and with beautiful lighting effects, surely the "why" of the Winter Fair will be answered.

Possibilities of Growth
There are many possibilities of growth. It can be enlarged upon each year so that within a comparatively short time people will come from the Rogue River valley and southern Oregon, not only, but from a much greater distance to see the Winter Fair, as well as to see what a southern Oregon winter is like.

And then the chickens never put on their finest feathers until in December; the apples never take on their richest and most beautiful tints of red and yellow until December. These, with green grass carpeting the lawns of the city and the valley of the Rogue; with chrysanthemums, roses, and geraniums still blooming gaily in our lawns and gardens—this is southern Oregon, the real place for a Winter Fair.

BREWSTER TO JUDGE POULTRY EXHIBITS

Will Give Lectures and Demonstrations During His Stay in City.

Charles S. Brewster, who has been selected to judge the poultry exhibits this year, is a great favorite with poultry men of the valley, and especially with young people. He is a recognized poultry authority by the American Poultry Association and was for a number of years head of the Poultry Department at Oregon Agricultural College. Mr. Brewster is at present with Kerr-Gifford Co., of Portland.

During his stay in Ashland, Mr. Brewster will give lectures and demonstrations which will be of interest to all engaged in and interested in poultry growing.

THREE HUNDRED YEARS

MAKE A DIFFERENCE

The first Thanksgiving was the appreciation of the Pilgrim Fathers for their harvest in their new-found home of liberty; it wasn't much to boast of as crops go nowadays, but they were thankful

When we think of the privations those early pioneers endured for an ideal, we see how thankful we can be for our comfortable homes, bountiful crops, general prosperity; it would be a long list if we named everything

You're probably thankful for a lot of things We're thankful for your patronage during the past year; it shows you appreciated our efforts to serve you; it gives us confidence to continue our value-giving
