BETTER THAN RUBIES:—Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me.—John 5:39.

SUPPORT THE WINTER FAIR

The Winter Fair is an institution that has been enjoying growth and developing into an asset that may mean much materially and socially to Ashland. Today marks the opening of the Fourth Winter Fair. Indications point to a most successful event. A few men and women of Ashland and Jackson county have labored without stint to make the event a success and a credit to the city and county. Others, many from distant points, will be represented with creditable exhibits. The expense of preparing and entering exhibits, even from points in close proximity to Ashland, is not equaled in dollars and cents by the premiums received, consequently some of them participate in the Fair, and aid in making it a success, at a direct financial loss.

With this in view the citizens of Ashland and vicinity can well afford to give the event moral and financial support. No little worry is being harbored by sponsors of the Fair relative to the financial results. Care has been exercised in holding expenses to a minimum, but at the best it costs no small sum to stage an event of the proportions and quality attained by the Winter Fair. It must receive liberal attendance if it is to be successful. Ashland must provide the bulk of attendance, and no one can well do less than to purchase a season ticket. The cost is within the reach of all. Do not stop with the purchase of tickets for yourself and family, but see to it that your neighbors and friends are persuaded to attend and give deserved financial support. To do so means continuance and growth for the Fair.

A HINDERANCE TO DEVELOPMENT

In his address to an Ashland audience yesterday noon, A. S. Dudley, executive manager of the State Chamber of Commerce, referred to the class of people who are favored by Nature, inheritance, or some other source with an easy living, yet give back nothing to their communities. They are better described in the statement that they receive all, yet give nothing in return.

It is not unlikely that almost every community in the nation is infested with this particular type of people, but in some communities they all but predominate, and unfortunately for the community in which they live. It matters not how independent a man may be financially. He may owe no man anything and be in a position to pay for all that he gets and more, yet that does not relieve him from responsibility to his community, his people and society in general. No man likes to be called a leech, but that is many who resemble the leech in their methods of living and in their dealings with their communities.

To receive the facilities for protection, education, business and social life and give nothing in return is not playing the game fairly. It constitutes a hinderance to the development and growth of the town and community. Communities, so infested, retard the growth of their geographical sections, and they in turn constitute an impediment in the growth and development of their state.

SPARE THE SAINT!

Icenoelasts, at the peril of dire evils, keep hands off Santa Claus!

The icenoelast is a rabid, red radical in the realm of sentiment. He has no imagination and he would dogmatically, selfishly prohibit the exercise of this inner source of pleasure to others. It costs him nothing; it cannot do him harm for others to enjoy what is beyond his reach; what business is it of his that there are myths that bring joy and happiness to millions?

Years ago the New York Sun printed an editorial in response to a little girl's question, "Is there a Santa Claus?" That editorial is a classic. It has been annually reprinted by many papers the world over. The argument was all presented and assurance given that the good Saint still lives and will live long after all the icenoelasts and Scrooges that ever were are turned into the commonest sort of clay.

There was once a man who attended a funeral of a great and good citizen and in the midst of the sincere tributes of friends who recalled the kindly deeds and exemplary virtues of the deceased, rose and reminded the congregation of mourners that once, when the deceased was quite a young man, he had made one misstep. That tactless violator of all that is decent and sacred and of taste and appropriateness is a pattern of perfect thoughtfulness by the crass smasher of the delightful fictions which have made youth happier for the centuries.

"Great truths are portions of the soul of man; great souls are portions of eternity."—James R. Lowell.

The problem of the son and daughter who go out every evening isn't much more distressing than the same kind of furnace.

The movies announce one reel films depicting the life of the ant, spider, bee, etc. Imagine sitting through a slow movie of a tortoise.

One of the most unpromising situations on earth is finding one's self a leading contender for a presidential nomination six months prior to the convention.

New Senators Who Are to Sit in Next Upper House

The story of Senator Lynn J. Frazier's rise from a poor farm lad, of how he worked his way through secondary school and college, being forced to live in the cheap lodgings of a grain buyer's office until finally he was called like Senator Johnson, of Minnesota, from a harvest field to accept the Non-Partisan League nomination for governor of North Dakota, reads like an extract from a book of fiction.

Lynn J. Frazier

Frazier is a dirt farmer, having lived upon a farm all his life. Shortly after his birth in Minnesota on December 21, 1874, he was taken by his parents to a government homestead in Pembina, North Dakota, which farm ever since has been his home. The original homestead, however, has been supplemented until now it is a farm of 480 acres in the fertile Red River valley.

After graduation in 1901 from the University of North Dakota, where he was a star football player, Frazier began preparations to study medicine, but the death of his father and elder brother forced him to return to manage the farm.

He soon became a thorough student of farm economics and, noticing that farmers oftentimes struck a balance on the wrong side of the ledger, set himself to better agricultural conditions through political and legislative action. To this end he assisted in forming the Non-Partisan League, hoping only to mitigate rural distress and with no thought of official position.

When the first Non-Partisan League State convention was held in Fargo April, 1916, Frazier was knowing that his name was under consideration for the gubernatorial nomination. He was called to the telephone and told of his selection. He won the nomination over two opponents and was elected governor. Three times he was re-elected.

After defeat in the Fall of 1921 Frazier came back in 1922, won the Republican primary nomination over Senator McCumber, chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee and co-author of the present tariff law. His election proved easy.

Frazier in 1903 married Miss Lottie Stafford, when twin daughters were born they were named Unie and Versie, in honor of the University of North Dakota.

Senator R.S. Copeland

Senator Copeland, virtually an unknown political quantity in New York before he was elevated to the senate with the Smith Democratic landslide last year, now has become almost overnight one of the potential presidential candidates within the Democratic party.

It is no closed secret in Washington that Copeland is being put forward by certain factions within his party as a possibility for the nomination at the convention next June. And why? Because these friends seeing a possible deadlock in the party, believe they have in Copeland a man who can step in as a "dark horse" and rally sufficient delegates to win, if not the presidential nomination, perhaps the vice-presidency.

Already political pilgrims are trekking to Copeland's suite in the senate office building. He is being called into high political conferences and gatherings. Medico has been a frequent caller; so has Underwood, an avowed candidate.

By profession Copeland is not a politician. All his life he has practiced medicine, headed medical colleges and was Health Commissioner of New York City, when elected, in 1922, over Senator Calder, the Republican incumbent. Copeland received the degree of Doctor of Medicine from the University of Michigan in 1889. Since that time he has been given degrees by Lawrence University and Syracuse University, and he is a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons.

After a post-graduate course in Europe, Copeland was appointed a professor in the Michigan Medical School, a position he held for 13 years. During his residence at Ann Arbor he served as Mayor, president of the Board of Education and member of the State Tuberculosis Board of Trustees.

In 1908 he was called to New York to become Dean of Flower Hospital Medical College. This position he filled for ten years until comandered by Mayor Hylan for Commissioner of Health. His majority over Calder was 281,246 votes. He polled heavily in New York City.

LAND OFFICE PLUM WILL FALL TO MEDFORD MAN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—H. Canady, of Medford, will be appointed register of the land office at Roseburg, despite adverse reports of the interior department, it was authoritatively learned. Canady is recommended by the Medford Organization and Senators McNary and Stanfield. Protests against Canady are said to have come from forces opposed to Ku Klux Klan in southern Oregon.

Put Yourself in her boots

If you had to do the household work, can you imagine a gift more welcome than one that would do your hardest work for you!

Electricity will save your wife hours of needless drudgery every week. Ask your electric dealer today about an electric range—that cooks all but automatically, with no lugging of coal, kindling or ashes, and for no more than the usual cost for fuel.

Or, if wash-day is her most trying task, ask for a demonstration of an electric washing machine with its power wringer. Electric ironers, vacuum sweepers, and electric sewing machines are play to work with—and they soon earn back what you pay for them.

Think what these electric conveniences would mean to you if you had to keep house! Plan to make this Christmas one to be remembered. Visit your dealer's today.

KLAMATH LAKE HAS INCH AND A HALF ICE

An inch and a half of ice was the sight that met the eyes of Klamath lake mariners this morning as they prepared to leave the Shipping docks, says the Monday's Herald. The ice extended as far as the eye could reach. Before Captain Wickstrom's power boat Modoc could depart it required several minutes' work breaking ice around the dock. This is the first ice reported on Klamath lake this winter.

SHORT DAIRY COURSE HAS BEEN IMPROVED

"Showing the Flag" Junket Will Compare with U. S. Trip Around World.

Oregon dairymen interested in manufacture will have an opportunity to pick up the most up-to-date information in the short course at the agricultural college January 7 to February 2, 1924. Creamery operators will take into consideration the competition of today which cuts the profit to a narrow margin, and discuss the important problem of efficiency. "Increased Efficiency and Quality" is the short course slogan. Practical work in buttermaking, ice-cream making, and cheese making will be given. The afternoons will be spent in the creamery on work to demonstrate points brought out in the lectures. Lectures will also be given on factory management, judging dairy products, bacteriology and on testing dairy products. The department formerly offered courses for inexperienced men,
