HER LEGACY DUE TO 75-YEAR ROMANCE

deeply devoted to a very lovely girl. They were boon companions, and because it was inevitable that one must lose should the other win, their friendship was unstrained when Lehmeier's rival and friend led the girl to the altar. In fact Lehmeier was the best man, and he wished them goodspeed on their matrimonial voyage.

Lehmeier's friend and his wife emigrated to America. A year later Lehmeier came also. His friend had settled in New Jersey. Louis Lehmeier chose Manhattan. As the years passed Lehmeier acquired one parcel of property after another. He built tenements and apartment houses. He was known as a man who always had money.

On late Summer afternoons of recent years Lehmeier would sit in the garden of the home where he had loved in his youth. Elizabeth Rosalie, the granddaughter of her whose image was graven on his heart, would knit in the shadow of the vines. Lehmeier, with a shawl thrown around his shoulders, turned his thought to the Mainz of yesteryear and murmured:

"My dear, I wish you could have seen your grandmother in her youth. Ah! but she was one of God's noble women."
