Business in Klamath Falls—
Andrew Miller, field secretary of the Oregon State Bankers' association, was a guest in Ashland last night from Portland, but departed this morning on the stage for Klamath Falls where he will transact business matters. Mr. Miller spoke at the forum luncheon of the Medford Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

We deliver the goods. Service is our motto. Detricks—phone 62. 53tf

To Roseburg—
A party consisting of L. L. Brown, A. Hill, W. Hibbert, and G. E. Colby were guests of Hotel Ashland last night. They have been working at Parker Station with a road crew, but said last night that zero weather had held several days up there and they had left with the intention of going to Roseburg for the remainder of the winter.

Among Out-of-town Visitors—
Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Bartlett, of Myrtle Point, were guests last night from Myrtle Point, Helen Best, of Milton, and Addie Over-tourf, of Freewater, are registered from out-of-town. Frank Gabel was an out-of-town visitor from The Dalles. E. W. Hrem, of Portland, is among out-of-town guests. Mr. and Mrs. W. Filkins were guests last night from Albany.

Toys Are Made for Christmas—
C. C. Weisenberger is the man with a big heart. For fear that some kiddie in Ashland will not have enough Christmas presents, Mr. Weisenberger has made toys including tables and tiny chairs, larger chairs and tables to match, and cribs. Each toy he has made is almost perfect in its workmanship and will last much longer than factory made creations and gives a youngster an ideal plaything. They have not been made for sale, but it is hoped that Mr. Weisenberger will put them on exhibit to see what handwork has done.

We believe we are offering the most complete line of fine merchandise in Southern Oregon.

Judges for the Domestic Dept.—
Judges who acted in the Domestic Art Department of the Winter Fair were Mrs. Minard, of the Plaza Confectionery; Mrs. Jorgenson of the Electric Bakery, and Mrs. Crandall, of the Virginia Cafe. The impromsion has evidently been conveyed that judges were acquainted with the entries and those who had entered exhibits. Such a thought is wrong inasmuch as awards were made without any knowledge of who entered on the part of the judges. Numbers were the only distinguishable point.

Yes real salt rising bread. 80tf
Most complete line of box chocolates in the city. Watch our window. Rose Bros. 84tf

A wonderful line of Jewelry. Some splendid offerings in Diamond rings.
Johnsons Jewelry Store.

Correction—
The third prize awarded for pastel in the Art department of the Winter Fair was given to Mrs. Ella Stevens and not Mrs. Ella Stearns as announced in the prize list. The title of the prize winning scene was "A Rock Bound Coast," and was only one of several that Mrs. Stevens entered. The picture portraying an aged man resting with his head in his hands and a book and candle resting close beside drew many comments and was one of Mrs. Stevens' works.

G. W. Pennebaker Visits—
G. W. Pennebaker, who will be remembered to pioneer business men in Ashland, is a business visitor here this week. Mr. Pennebaker is connected with the California Fruit and Nursery Company at Stockton, Cal. but has come to collect some rain and snow which southern California is badly in need of. The visitor was the first boy to set type on the Valley Record, a paper that has since evolved to the region of his birth. Mr. Pennebaker has not resided here since 1907.

PURDIN IS PARDONED BY GOVERNOR PIERCE

SALEM, Dec. 13.—Charles W. Purdin, Spanish war veteran under sentence of six years for killing his divorced wife and a man found with her on December 30, 1921, has been pardoned by Governor Pierce. The double killing took place in Portland, following Purdin's return from the Soldiers' hospital in Sawtelle, Calif. The pardon is made on condition that Purdin return to the Sawtelle institution, he having been in the prison hospital ever since his arrival.

COMMITTEE STUDYING REPARATIONS QUESTION

PARIS, Dec. 13.—The International Reparations commission met and discussed the personnel of members of the committee to study Germany's capacity for reparation payments. It is learned that commission has practically decided to suggest former Director of the Budget Chas. E. Dawes as one of the three American members.

Health Hints
by the Father of Physical Culture
BERNARR MACFADDEN

More than a score of years ago I first called attention to the intimate physical relationship existing between hair health and physical health. The obvious reason, and the most frequent of all reasons, for hair troubles—excepting those that result from direct infection by parasites—is lack of physical vigor, and neglect to maintain the scalp in hygienic condition.

Very often hair loss in later life is due to lack of care of the scalp of the infant after birth. I cannot impress too strongly upon mothers the necessity of seeing to it that the greatest possible care in the treatment of the scalp of their babies is exercised at this time.

The hair and scalp of children, as well as of adults, must be kept scrupulously clean, so as to prevent the clogging up of the follicles by dust or dirt, and to prevent itching and irritation to the scalp, caused by the presence of the foreign matter. This practice should be religiously followed.

The value of brushing the hair regularly can hardly be emphasized too strongly. In the hair itself it polishes and will tend to increase very greatly its lustre. By the principal value lies in the influence of its proper use upon the scalp.

Brushing should be performed once or twice each day. Some women prefer to use a brush with stiff bristles for removing dandruff, and then use a soft one for polishing and arranging the hair. Many women have great trouble while doing up their hair, in preventing snarls and tangles from developing. If these women would always be careful to divide the hair into strands and to begin combing at the tip of the hair, taking only a few inches and gradually working back to the roots, a little at a time, they would avoid much of this trouble.

I shall give many other valuable suggestions on the care of the hair in subsequent articles.

WRECK BY DOPE WILL TRY TO SAVE OTHERS

England coast, packed away the dolls of her childhood to attend fashionable Ward-Belmont College.

Hays Fernald, 30 years old, met the lass just half his age. He loved—she thought she did. And so they eloped. It is seldom child brides are happy—and Helen Fernald was not happy. Divorce soon followed.

Then came New York and Broadway. Helen Fernald could sing. Her sweet, simple beauty attracted. She found herself at the Winter Garden, a featured player—Helen French.

There followed a meeting with Lieutenant Walker—young dashing; telling tales of the coral-swept beaches of Luzon, where he was stationed with his regiment. And so Mrs. Samuel P. Walker entered the story.

Happy in Luzon
"It was heaven there!" "Helen Smith," from behind her bars on Welfare Island, explains. "All the charm of the Orient! And the charm of the Orient! And then—Tears fill the dimmed eyes. "The islands are not meant for white folk. Fever got me. The army doctor came daily. He gave me medicine—a powder. Later I found it was morphine."

"What does it matter now that the doctor was court-martialed? The vice had been fastened upon me. Another divorce was certain to follow—the end came quickly. "I returned to Broadway then—'Helene French' again. This time it was 'The Pollies.' None suspected. I was spending $18 a day for the drug then—my salary wouldn't meet my dope bill. And so I went down and down. Oh, I reached the depth—the very bottom!"

"One must have drugs—I got them."

MITCHELL
Clothing For Men
Near the Postoffice Ashland, Oregon

"That was until one night, with but $1 to my name, my hotel ordered me out. They took my little baggage that I had saved from the pawn shops. A policeman found me—I came here to Welfare Island, a prisoner in the Women's Workhouse, as "Helen Smith."

Welcomes Cell
"I'm glad I am a prisoner. That may sound strange, but I have found my first happiness in years here.

"I have four months more to serve—then, I hope, I will be strong enough to keep on the straight and narrow path. I know it will be hard. My old associates—the drug peddlers, the old crowd of drug users will all be after me, tempting, pleading, urging. But I know I shall be strong enough to resist.

"What a nightmare it has been! Whoever said the road down was easy never took that road. It is hell!"

not the primrose path—every inch of the way is covered with thorns and heartaches. I have lived them all."

And when "Helen Smith" gets out, she says, she is going to be just her own self again—the girl who came from the little New England fishing village to Broadway.

"I am going to devote every hour keeping other girls from a life such as mine. I have met other girls here—their stories are more pitiful than my own.

"There are mothers, school teachers, girls from the farms—women of education and refinement. Most of them became drug addicts just as I did—a doctor's prescription taken without knowledge of what it meant.

"I am going to fight—fight that other girls may know what I have lived and save themselves from easy never took that road. It is hell!"
