Health Hints
by the Father of Physical Culture
BERNARD MACFADDEN

When we consider that it is a part of the plan of Nature to compel the human body to breathe in and breathe out oxygen, without the time of birth until the time of death, that fact alone ought to stamp the act of breathing as one of tremendous significance and overwhelming importance. What makes us inhale and what exhale? While we have a large control over our breathing apparatus, the principal operation is absolutely beyond our control or volition and goes on day and night, asleep or awake, conscious or unconscious, in the new-born babe as well as in the healthy adult.

In Macfadden's Encyclopedia of Physical Culture scientists tell us that the average adult inhales 480 cubic inches of air per minute while at rest. If he walks four or five miles an hour, he draws in five times as much, or 2,400 cubic inches per minute; if he walks six miles an hour, he draws in seven times as much, or 3,360 cubic inches per minute.

We have but to look at the function of breathing to realize its supreme importance. There are three chief things that breathing accomplishes: First, the elimination of impurities from the blood and at the same time its revivification. Second, the warming of the body. Third, it performs the last very useful act in the processes of converting the food that has been digested by the stomach into blood for use throughout the body.

New Senators Who Are Sitting In Upper House

Clarence C. Dill, of Washington, Senator Dill is the "baby member" of the Senate. He is only 39 and is a bachelor.
Though young in years, Dill is old in political experience, having served two consecutive terms in the House of Representatives where he first was elected in 1914. He was defeated for re-election in 1918.

Dill in 1917 was one of the "willful men" who voted against the war, for which he was excoriated by Woodrow Wilson. Once America entered the war, however, Dill rallied full strength to the fight, and his work was rewarded by President Wilson with appointment as chairman of the Congressional delegation which went to Europe to study war conditions.

It never occurred to Dill when he was teaching school in southern Indiana several years ago, after graduation from Ohio Wesleyan University, that one day he would represent Washington in both the House and Senate. He was so content with the Middle West that he at first refused an offer to teach in Spokane, his present home. He was later persuaded and went West in 1907 to teach and study law.

In 1912 Dill took an active part in the campaign of Governor Ernest Lister and became Lister's private secretary. From that the step was short to national politics. He is the second Democrat ever to represent Washington in the Senate. 1896 Judge George Turner was elected to the Legislature as a result of fusion of the Populist and Democratic parties. Not until Dill defeated Senator Poindexter by a 4,000 majority has another Democrat been successful there.

Dill made a leading issue of "Newberyism" in his campaign, lambasted the tariff bill and championed the farmer and labor elements.
M. M. Neely, of West Virginia.
Senator Neely entered politics with the chief aim of smashing what was known throughout West Virginia a few years ago as the "Coal Trust" domination of the state. That control of candidates and offices extended to both the State and national fields. Unless a candidate had the backing of the coal mine owners the chances for success at the polls were slim. This condition angered Neely, and he set about as early as 1902 to "beat the bosses," as he called

FANS PAY 'TEX' RICKARD 10 MILLIONS

Gross Receipts of Swatfist Promoter Make Stag-gering Sum.
17 YEARS IN GAME
Started Life in Texas As a Cow-puncher; Few Bouts Have Ever Failed.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—From the very modest beginning of cowpuncher in Texas, through a sportsman's career which saw him proprietor of many noted gambling houses in the West and Northwest, George L. (Tex.) Rickard today stands out the greatest and most successful boxing promoter the world has ever seen. Seventeen years as a promoter of fistie entertainment have seen nearly ten million dollars find their way into the Rickard coffers.

To be specific the "gates" of fights sponsored by Tex have reached the staggering total of $9,550,556.71, which includes his last venture, the Renault-Johnson bout. This total is the fruit of nearly 120 bouts, but before he quits the fight promoting game Tex expects to reach the twenty million mark.

"And why not?" he said the other day. "Boxing, you know, is still in its infancy."
Of his grand total Rickard has paid out to fighters $4,500,000 and to the Federal Government $1,296,106.22 in taxes.

"Bug" Stings Him
On September 3, 1906, the fight bug stung Tex and stung him so well that to date he has not recovered.
HOUSE LEADERS ARE FORCED TO CAPITULATE
WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Republican House leaders capitulated to the little group of Northwestern insurgents, agreeing to place Representative John M. Nelson, of Wisconsin, insurgents' leader, on the powerful rules committee. The refusal of the leaders to do this at the opening of Congress blocked the completion of the house organization two days, during which insurgents tied up business.

ed up Battling Nelson, then a ring sensation on the Pacific Coast, to battle Joe Gans, title-holder, for the lightweight championship of the world. The bout was staged on September 3, 1906, and Gans and Nelson fought their famous forty-one-round battle, which netted Tex a $69,715 "gate" and a neat profit of $36,215.

Tex was off to a good start, but had difficulty in matching fighters until 1910, when, under his financial guidance, Jeffries and Jack Johnson met in Reno and increased his private exchequer with a cool $150,000.

"Battle of Century"
Since then he has promoted fight after fight, reaching the climax of his unfinished career with the Dempsey-Carpenter "battle of the century" at Boyle's Thirty Acres, in Jersey City. The battle magnetized receipts which which totaled $1,525,580, of which Tex retained possession of something like $800,000 and paid out about $435,000 for the world's greatest arena.

The Dempsey-Firpo swatfist was his other promotion which topped the million-dollar mark. And of all the bouts he has staged only two or three have been financial failures. The most
