WIND SUBSIDES: HOPE PREVAILS FOR VESSELS

SEATTLE, Dec. 26.—With the announcement of the weather bureau that gales which swept the Northwest have completely subsided, maritime men are optimistic regarding the safety of a half dozen vessels which have been in distress at Puget Sound and along the coast. The most serious accident befell the freighter Yogen Maru, which went aground at the entrance of Grays Harbor. The ship is in grave danger of being battered to pieces. Reports from other vessels indicate that they are limping to ports of safety. Heavy damage was sustained at Seattle as a result of the storm. The county-owned ferry sank at the dock in Lake Washington and is a total loss.

The work of a number was illustrated first, in a violin solo, played by Mr. Henry of the High school. To repeated applause he generously responded. Mrs. Henry sang one of Carrie Jacob Bond's lovely songs, kindly responding to encore.

The House of Rimmon—

The following from the pen of Prof. H. G. Gilmore, is in appreciation of the entertainment to be given by Dr. Mattie Shaw, for the Wednesday Club on New Year's Eve, and sent to the editor of these columns.

"The strictly up-to-date tourist city that, by judicious advertising, has earned a place on the map under the fascinating title of 'Ashland the Beautiful', is the home—to put it in the triple form of physician, dramatist and authoress in the person of Dr. Mattie B. Shaw who, on the public platform professionally and in private life insistently, has nobly set forth the many claims Ashland has to offer the tourist bent upon enjoying the best nature has to furnish in the various health pursuing quests of life.

"With this much said in appreciation of our progressive city, we pass on to announce that, at an early date Dr. Mattie Shaw will, under the auspices of the Wednesday Afternoon Club, give a reading in the Presbyterian church of Henry Van Dyke's 'House of Rimmon'—a drama in four acts—ten characters taken entirely by herself—and which creation is regarded by exacting critics, as one of the greatest productions from the pen of the gifted dramatist. Henry Van Dyke's world renowned 'America for me' equally with Longfellow's 'Psalm of Life' and Tennyson's 'In Memoriam', serve as so many examples of the brightest and most soul inspiring conceptions, in verse, of the human intellect, and at Dr. Shaw's forthcoming reading all the qualities that made these writers so distinguished in their respective pursuits of learning, will be in evidence and those of our citizens who appreciate the poetic creations of great minds should be present to measure the mastery of Henry Van Dyke as a dramatist of the very first water.

"It should be stated that Dr. Shaw has given the same masterpiece before audiences at Hood River and at Portland at the Multnomah Hotel under the auspices of the combined Woman's Clubs and before an enthusiastic audience that entirely filled the commodious Assembly Hall. It would be a work of supererogation to particularize as to the technical excellence Dr. Shaw has acquired in the rendition of the great masters she undertakes to interpret, but those who heard her in the Masonic Hall, eighteen months ago in Tennyson's 'Enoch Arden' recognize the significance of the task of reciting a work, entirely from memory, and which occupied one hour and thirty minutes in its delivery.

"The Wednesday Afternoon club is to be congratulated in securing the services of Dr. Shaw for so great an undertaking, and all who have yet to make the acquaintance of one of the greatest of living dramatists, should do so, on an occasion where the greatest of literary gems, at the hands of Dr. Shaw holds high carnival, for an entire evening."—H. G. G.

Mrs. Oeder Entertains—

Mrs. Oeder had as guests at a charming Christmas dinner, Mrs. Fielding and her sister Mrs. Hale of Santa Monica, and Mr. and Mrs. Gruelle and children. The evening was spent most pleasantly in Mrs. Oeder's cozy home on Granite street.

The hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Fuller was the scene of a jolly pre-Christmas party, that had been planned by the guests at the delightful dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Gruelle recently. It had been arranged that this should be a costume party in which the guests represented their not so distant childhood and realistic indeed were the costumes assumed for the happy affair.

The rooms were in holiday attire and looked gay and Christmas in the glow of candles and Christmas coloring.

A tree, laden with gifts for all the party and all especially appropriate for the period represented was a special feature, and these gifts were accompanied by jolly little rhymes that helped the fun along.

All this was preceded by a most elaborate Christmas dinner of many and delicious courses. The evening was rounded out in well told tales in the glow of the firelight.

Family Dinner at Mrs. Josephine Poley's—

Mrs. Josephine Poley and daughters were hostesses at the family Christmas gathering this year.

Those who enjoyed it with them, were Mr. and Mrs. C. Hartley and children of Phoenix, Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Poley and daughters and Mrs. Poley's nephew, Mr. Horace T. Mitchell and his sons Delbert and James who came as a happy Christmas surprise.

Miss May Poley has returned to her work in the Riddle High school.

Mr. and Mrs. Shelton Entertain—

Mr. and Mrs. George Shelton were host and hostess at a most delightful Christmas dinner at their pleasant home on Third street.

Mrs. Pearl Kearney and daughter Betty Marie and Mrs. Josephine Crocker were complimented guests.

It was three o'clock turkey dinner, with all the delicious accompaniments that go with a Christmas feast, and the rooms were very beautiful in their holiday dress.

The Wm. Day's Entertain—

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Day were host and hostess at a delightful Christmas dinner, served at two o'clock on Christmas Day.

Mr. and Mrs. Gowdy were the complimented guests. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Day were guests at the Kinney home, at the Christmas gathering there.

Family Gathering at Mr. and Mrs. Kinney's—

On Christmas Day Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kinney were host and hostess at the family reunion and Christmas dinner for the Wagner families and Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Miles of Medford.

In the evening, the celebration was continued with Mr. and Mrs. Day, Mr. and Mrs. Peil and Mrs. Atkinson as added guests for the jolly "Christmas Exchange" that is an institution in the family and group of friends, on this occasion.

To realize the fun that is enjoyed, one must be a participant in this jolly function.

Christmas Gathering at the Dodges—

The Christmas celebration began the night before with a lovely Christmas tree in the J. P. Dodge home. At this the family were gathered, with Miss Williamson as special guest.

On Christmas Day, came the family dinner, with Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Dodge as host and hostess in their pleasant home on the Boulevard. The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. Gale, and family, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Dodge and children, Mr. and Mrs. Will Dodge and Miss Williamson.

The delightful three course dinner was at noonday, with the dining room a bower of beauty, in its holiday coloring, and greenery and the afternoon and evening was spent in this happy hospitable home, in family visit and Christmas cheer.

Married—

The marriage of Miss Helen Dickerson and Mr. A. J. McCallen was solemnized Thursday evening Dec. 26, at the Methodist Parsonage, the Rev. S. J. Chaney officiating. Mr. and Mrs. John Finnerman were the attendants.

After the ceremony the wedding party returned to the Finnerman home, where a delightful wedding supper was served, with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Enders, Jr. and Miss Thelma McCredie as added guests.

Mr. and Mrs. McCallen went immediately to their home on the Boulevard.

Both the young people are very well known in Ashland, having lived here for years.

Mr. McCallen is one of the progressive young business men of the city and is present owner of the Ashland Creamery

NEWS LETTER

LONDON, Dec. 26.—Interesting relics of Stone Age Africa have been discovered by F. W. Migeod, noted English explorer, in a journey through the British Cameroons, the large province on the eastern coast of Africa, part of which was ceded to Britain following the war.

In various parts of the province Migeod unearthed many paleolithic and neolithic axe-heads and other weapons and implements, and found many traces of prehistoric civilization giving indications that man existed in Africa many thousands of years ago.

Migeod discovered many strange customs and practices existing among some of the savage tribes, and found that, contrary to the general belief, many of the tribes have very strict laws against intermarriage and the practice of polygamy.

The Moen and Munshie tribes, who live south of the Benue River practice a curious custom of double marriage. When a male member of the tribe marries, his sister weds the brother of the bride. Should a sister be unavailable, he has to give equivalent service to his brother-in-law for working for him. The average of a sister is about three years not very hard work, according to Migeod.

The Munshie laws against polygamy are so strict that beside them the American laws of affinity are stark simplicity.

When a marriage is afoot a family council is convened, composed generally of elders with long memories, whose business is to see that no impediments of relationship exist between the in-laws and bridegroom.

These family councils are often so lengthy and complicated and the impediments are so difficult to unravel and surmount that the meetings break up unsuccessful, says Migeod.

One tribe has traditional names for twins, varying if they are both boys or girls or mixed. The natives claim these names were given them by God.

Another tribe buries its dead like the ancient Egyptians in a niche opening onto a shaft sunk in the ground. The bodies are protected with bamboos so that no earth may fall into the chamber and press them, and then the shaft is filled up.

Whistler, famous American painter, whose pictures even now are bought eagerly by wealthy Americans for anything up to a hundred thousand dollars, apparently knew the value of publicity—even being his own press agent, according to a batch of seventy letters shortly to be put up for auction.

In some of them he is revealed as an insatiable seeker after publicity, even when abroad writing to his secretary and asking him to insert paragraphs in the newspapers about his activities and doings.

Whistler is also revealed as being rather tight where the purse strings were concerned. In a letter to a water company concerning water charges he is very indignant about an apparent overcharge, and winds up: "How the devil can they ask five dollars for water when I myself gave notice to the collector that the house was not inhabited months ago, and the man told me the tax after that would be a mere nothing?"

The letters are expected to fetch a high price, competition being very keen.
