W. P. FULLER & CO. TO REACH 3,000,000 PEOPLE

Executive Advertising Campaign Inaugurated by Well Known Paint Company.

"Newspapers reaching a population of 3,000,000 people in nine Western states will be used by W. P. Fuller & Co., pioneer manufacturers, in the Company's 1924 advertising campaign," according to an announcement just made by K. L. Hamman, president of Johnston-Ayres company advertising agency.

"An appropriation providing for an intensive demand-creating and agent-helping advertising campaign has been approved by officials of W. P. Fuller & Co. The first newspaper advertisements will be published in the Ashland Tidings early in the year and will continue throughout 1924."

"In a year like 1924," continued Mr. Hamman, "the agent and Dealer selling a quality line of paint such as manufactured by W. P. Fuller & Co., have found that intensive advertising campaign, in which paint and varnish specialties for use in the home are featured materially stimulates sales."

Agents to be Featured Sales promotion work in connection will be assisted by E. L. Lomax, manager of the Sales Promotion department of Johnston-Ayres company.

"Officials of W. P. Fuller & Co. regard the newspaper advertising of paint and varnish specialties for the home as a real service not only to the prospective purchaser, but to every agent and dealer," according to Lomax.

"In order that the Fuller agents may profit to the greatest extent by such an advertising campaign, the name of every authorized Fuller agent will be carried as a definite part of every newspaper advertisement in the 1924 campaign."

"In order to still further benefit the Fuller agent, said Lomax, "special advertisements will be published featuring the service of the Fuller agent in giving painting advice. In 1924, the retailer will be the first consideration."

Fuller Agents to Tie in With Campaign

"Many of the merchants selling Fuller products have already signified their desire to advertise in their local newspapers, making known the fact that they carry a full line of Fuller products," according to Lomax.

Perfumes as Old as History

When and where perfumes first came into existence there is no clear record. Arabia, Egypt, India and Persia used precious ointments, dry and resinous gums or scented oils 2000 years B. C., while the toilet of no Greek or Roman was complete without his daily perfumed rub, no temple rite without its smoking, swinging censers. In the enlightened days of good Queen Bess perfumes were camouflage for uncleanliness and as time went on their use spread the love for perfumes becoming so strong in England that even a Puritan maid smuggled some over in her coif, landing it sans duty on Plymouth Rock—a feat impossible today.

Centuries passed before much progress was made in the perfume art. Not till Catherine de Medici wed the Duke of Orleans and brought from Italy a Florentine perfumer named Rene, who started a shop in Paris, was the tremendous development of the trade established. The vogue for foreign perfumes still holds sway over the imagination of many women who are influenced more by the magic word "imported," the always attractive label and bottle, than by the actual scent.

It remained for the pioneer American perfumers Colgate and Co. to prove this by actual experiments. Believing that most women selected their perfumes by the eye

"Merchants have discovered that their own advertisements, tying up with the manufacturer's advertising campaign, give them distinct individuality in their community," Lomax explained. "Advertising by the agent or dealer forcefully directs the attention of the prospective paint buyer to the individual store. In other words, when a prospect has been sold upon the idea of painting a certain job, the agent's or dealer's advertisement tells him where and from whom to buy his paint."

Fuller Branches Give Quick Distribution "Direct distribution service from any one of the twenty-two Fuller branches on the Pacific Coast will permit retailers to cash in on this intensive 1924 advertising campaign," according to Otis N. Johnson, manager of the sales promotion department of W. P. Fuller & Co. "Direct distribution is one of the exclusive features of service and will be emphasized in the 1924 campaign."

"Any Fuller Agent or Dealer can secure delivery on any Fuller product within 24 hours," said Johnson. "This permits the active Fuller agent to increase his turnover from one, two, or three times a year to five and six times a year, thus materially increasing his profits in the paint department."
