Health Hints by the Father of Physical Culture

BERNARR MACFADDEN

The eliminating system of the body might be compared to the sanitary department of a city—the smoke inspecting department to the lungs; the street cleaning department to the skin; and the sewerage system to the bowels. An efficient sanitary department means a clean, healthy and beautiful city and efficient eliminating system means the same state of affairs in the body. Let but one of these functions in either city or body fail to do its work and the city or body as a whole suffers.

It was such trouble that brought a friend of mine for advice. One of his body cleaning departments had begun to slow up and there were various symptoms presenting themselves that warned him it was time to put matters into shape.

Being an ordinary being, he imagined that his body was immune to disease, and that he could abuse and put anything into his body that he desired or that his appetite dictated. He had smoked and chewed tobacco and had indulged in alcohol in a glass of beer or whiskey. He had always answered the "call to nature" and did his share in keeping up the high cost of living every time he sat down to the table. He had consumed ham, bacon, salt pork, meats and fowl, lobsters, oysters and clams, vinegared and salted, as well as spiced foods of various kinds, tea, coffee, pastry and denatured foods galore—all eaten without regard to proper combinations and without any idea of what happened to them when they got into the alimentary tract. One of the eliminative channels of his body—the kidneys, had become clogged with waste material and poisonous substances, and being just human flesh and blood, had broken down under the strain of trying to eliminate from the body substances for which Nature had made no provision, and consequently an inflammation had set in—he had acquired that insidious disease that takes away some of the best people in the land, chronic nephritis or Bright's disease.

Bright's disease is the price those who transgress the laws of right living have to pay for their failure to realize that they are but human.

RANCHER AT 84 LIKE YOUNG MAN

Strength of Younger Years Restored by Korex Compound

"I felt myself growing old so fast," says J. L. Rowell, 84 year old rancher of Kaw City, Oklahoma, "that I had no appetite and hardly felt like living. After taking korex compound I am as young and vigorous as at 30 and feel better all the time. I can now walk with a firm, elastic step and can get out and do a man's work with any of them." The effect of using korex compound is healthful, natural and lasting say many who have used it. Thousands have tested it the world over for premature old age, weakness after the flu, poor circulation, lack of appetite and aching limbs. Those feeling the need of such an invigorator will be interested in learning that the American distributors of korex compound arranged for korex compound to be sold in Ashland at East Side Pharmacy. Just ask for korex.

Pioneer Resident Vividly Recalls Early Days in Ashland

(C. B. Watson)

In the early 70's Ashland was a small pioneer hamlet with very few sources for the entertainment of the young people, yet I doubt if there is so much of enjoyment and happiness now, with all of the varied sources at hand. There was no railroad and the daily stages drawn by six horses and commanded by that important factotum, the stage driver, who generally had some story of adventure to regale the crowd that invariably gathered at the post office for the days event filled the daily paper. In the winter time dancing, spelling schools and weekly singing school were attended and enjoyed, while everybody attended church at the down upon a man when he shows others how to be happy.

Southern Oregon is a place that easily pushes the Garden of Eden for first money. It is a spot that God created upon a day when He wanted to show what He could do when He really tried. The Creator probably made California as a sort of experiment or test and then created Southern Oregon to put in some of the things He overlooked in making California.

Personally I prefer fine scenery, pure aid and water, rich soil, perfect climate and good fishing to San Francisco, Los Angeles or the hot valleys and deserts of California. I prefer to live rather than to exist. I prefer to be happy and healthy rather than to be in congested centers where the odors are stifling and where it costs you a quarter to park your Kelley every time you eat.

The great outdoors invite. And in this limitless expanse of Nature's lavishness there are opportunities that beckon and promise rewards beyond the dreams of the human brain.

Come out to Southern Oregon, folks, and look around. Your eyes were made to see with, and your lungs were made to inhale air as it comes fresh from the factory.

school house. When I came the oldest inhabitant exploited his experience, proud of the fact that he had been here for twenty years. His experiences with the Indians; adventures with grizzly bears, mountain lions and such things because of the modesty of the narrator.

During the warm Sunday afternoon, Granite street, which extended a little above where the auto camp ground is now located, was the line of parade of the happy young people, who would stroll to the Hargadine saw mill located there and back along the "Harga, dine grade" which is now, in different dressing, the drive from the auto camp ground back into town. It was a joyous walk. Where the Chautauqua auditorium now is, Hargadine had a small orchard with a high rail fence about it. We always climbed that fence, and came to the bank of the mill race which now tumbles its water over the bank into the park near the Plaza. The old mill then stood there and a high flume conducted the water to and above the great "over-shot wheel," where it lent its force to assure us of bread. We then walked out on the flume to the door that opened into the upper story of the mill, thence the stairway was utilized to reach the front door and the street.

Our real gala days were those when a crowd rustled up the best "rigs" in town and hied away to Soda Springs where we were sure of a splendid dinner to be prepared by "The Old Lady Caldwell" who presided at the enjoyable hostelry. We always found something to interest us and occasionally were thrilled with a run-a-way on the way home. These were really enjoyable days and the girls in no land were as beautiful and sweet as the Ashland girls, nor more happy.

In the spring of 1872, "Bill" Daily, a carpenter, who now lives on Butte creek, proposed to me that we build a trap and catch fish at the Hargadine dam at the foot of Oak street and where the road reached Bear creek. There was a heavy run of steel heads and I had spent all the time I could sitting on the bank and watching the fish jump over the dam. It was a great sight to me. "Bill" knew how to build the trap and I was eager to help and have an interest in the enterprise. We got a long fir pole and peeled the bark off and placed it just above and a little in front of where the water plunged over the dam. We then riveted some slats, such as were made for fence pickets; made a frame, V shaped frame, about three feet deep and eight feet long and nailed our slats for the ends and sides. It was open at the top and about three feet wide. This trap we swung with straps to the pole so that it would swing just below and a little behind the fall. We tied a rope to each end so that we could draw it out and return it to its place again. We put it in place in the evening and returned to it the next morning, after a restless night, because of my anxiety for the venture. In attempting to scale the fall the fish would generally have to make several efforts before they succeeded. Each failure would of course result in their falling back and our plan was that they would fall into the trap. When we got to the trap the next morning a wonderful sight met our gaze; we had about 50 beautiful fish in the trap, many of them two feet long, some more than that. It was a job to get them up to town where we gave them away right and left. While the run lasted we practically furnished the town with fish. We charged nothing for them, but required that they must carry them home themselves. Every morning we were sure of plenty of company. In those days Ashland creek furnished a good many steelheads and far up the brushy canyon we were sure of an abundance of trout.

Deer were plentiful and the hunting was good within the present city limits. Bear frequently wandered into town and sometimes an old grizzly would carry off somebody's calf or shoat. There was no game nor fish law to hinder nor restrict the sportsman and many tales of adventure were reported. "Them days is gone for even"
