HOW DO YOU USE YOUR FACTS

Educationally we seem to be in the midst of an era of testing and examining of some kind. Not only teachers and school authorities but anyone who feels so inclined may set some test or other for anyone who is willing to try his skill at answering.

There are poetry tests and history tests and general information tests; there are tests of all shades and descriptions, and tests of all degrees of difficulty. It would be folly to deny that much good can be gained from such testing. It is interesting to know which boy in school possesses more current history facts; which girl can tell the source of most quotations in poetry, and what young pupil knows the greatest number of capitals of the countries of the world.

This information about the pupils can readily be obtained; you have but to test and the thing is done. And in so far as such tests may stimulate hundreds of other boys and girls to further efforts to acquire such information, these tests take on an additional value. The spirit of rivalry and competition which they foster is on the whole a good thing.

In giving such tests to adults, as Mr. Edison did some time ago, and as others have done before and after him, it is well to remember that such mere acquiring of facts is by no means the whole of education. The fact that it is often mistaken for education renders it necessary that we should insist strongly on it that the mere acquiring of facts may have in itself but little to do with education. What gives such information value is the use to which the holder of it may put it when there is occasion to use it. It is what you do with a fact that makes it important and worth while. Otherwise our minds remain lumber-rooms.

It is this practice of using facts which distinguishes the educated man from him who is a mere collector of facts. A half dozen facts properly used may give the individual a new view point on life; it may open visions never before open to him; it may stimulate thought of a depth and scope which could never be obtained through the haphazard collection of hundreds of facts.

Facts, definite and irrefragable facts, are the foundation. The superstructure is thinking. That's what facts should be used for.

THREAT OF A TAX BILL VETO

It was to be expected, perhaps, that following the action of the United States Senate adopting the compromise revenue schedules proposed by Senator Simmons, a Democrat, and supported by a coalition of Democrats, insurgent Republicans and Farm Bloc senators, there would be hints of a forthcoming executive veto. But it is noticed that no very definite statement is made that this course will be followed by President Coolidge. It is announced in White House circles that the President does not deem it prudent to state, in advance of his action, his intention in respect to any legislation passed by Congress. This, apparently, does not preclude the circulation of "rumors" as to his intentions. Sometimes by this process a more or less exact measure can be taken of public opinion regarding just such matters as the one under consideration.

From a popular viewpoint it is safe to say that no single act which will come before the President during the present session, or before the November elections, will be regarded as of greater importance than the revenue bill affecting taxes on incomes. It is a matter which intimately concerns every man, woman and child in the United States, either directly or indirectly. Thus while it is true that action by Congress has not been along the exact lines recommended by the Republican Party and Administration leaders, it will be quite generally accepted as one promising that immediate economic relief which has been so long sought. As assayed by the individual taxpayer, its possible benefits are not measured by any partisan rule or standard. It is enough, as the great majority of people see it, that it affords release from a part of a tedious burden of war taxes.

After all is said and done, the measure which will undoubtedly be agreed upon in conference and finally sent to the President does represent, upon the face of the record, the deliberate judgment of a majority of Congress. Theoretically, at least, it represents the wishes of a majority of the voters. But purely from considerations of expediency and the common welfare it may reasonably appear that the law as shaped by those who have acted in disregard of the President's expressed wishes is preferable to no measure of relief whatever. Unless the pending bill can be passed over a veto, should a veto be interposed, no remedial action in the form of tax legislation can be expected from Congress at the present session, and probably not from those comprising the present membership.

In November next the people will avail themselves of the opportunity to speak definitely upon the subject. It is doubtful if they would spontaneously commend any party or faction which cared to assume the responsibility for a complete failure to relieve the taxpayers of a portion of their interest burden—Christian Science Monitor.

Old John Collier on the Job

By Bert Ball.
(National Crop Improvement Service.)
JOHN COLLIER of Kankakee is the dean of all county agents and his success is due to the community spirit he has fostered among his people.
"Probably his greatest achievement is the organization of his young men and women. He learned early in the farm bureau history that if he were compelled to go about from farm to farm talking seedbed and soils, that he would be years getting acquainted with all the problems which need his attention," says Dennis A. Merriman of the American Steel and Wire Co. "He also learned that it was difficult to make much change in the habits of farmers of middle life and while they are all very friendly with John, he made up his mind that he would cultivate the young people and he organized both the young men and young women into county community clubs. Now, when there is anything doing it is as good as done because they all jump to their stations and put it across in such a way that the older folks fall into line and like it. John is a diplomat and that is why he succeeds."

The One Best Tire

Until C-T-C cords came on the market early last year all tires seemed very much alike to the average car owner.

But these big oversize C-T-C hand-built low inflation cords have proved so notably superior that it is a gratification to us to carry them as a part of our very superior service to motorists.

C-T-C's were the first tires built for reasonably low inflation to make riding easier and "conserve the car", being even stronger and heavier than ordinary cords. The tread is especially toughened to stand mountain and crushed-rock roads, and is unequalled for non-skid. Nor can any tire on the market outwear them.

There is also a C-T-C hand-built Balloon tire for extreme low inflation, which fits any standard wheel and rim.

C-T-C Tubes add mileage to almost any casing.

MAN WHO INJURED TRAFFIC COP CAPTURED

EUGENE, May 21.—Leslie Farmer, who Sunday night shot Earl Humphrey, city traffic officer while the officer was attempting to place him under arrest, as a bootlegger suspect, was captured yesterday. He had been under a barn near his home, he said, until today when he went to his home. Members of the family called the police.

Farmer when questioned in the district attorney's office, declared he did not shoot Humphrey purposely, but that his revolver was discharged accidentally. A formal charge of assault with intent to kill was lodged against Farmer in justice court last evening.

FATHER AND SON FREED BY CORONER'S JURY

KELSO, Wash., May 21.—The coroner's jury that heard testimony relative to the death of Opal Smith, accidentally shot on Friday in an altercation between her grandfather, W. H. Freeman, and W. W. Read, who is in the local hospital with a serious bullet wound, today exonerated Freeman and his son, Walter Freeman, from responsibility for the death of the child, holding that the shooting was accidental.

Testimony at the inquest was that the gun in Walter Freeman's hand was discharged, the bullet striking the child, when someone caught Walter Freeman's hand. W. H. Freeman then picked up the gun and shot Read who was attacking him with an ax handle.

SALESMAN DIES WHILE AT WHEEL OF HIS AUTO

PORTLAND, May 20.—Roy Altenburg, 35, salesman died suddenly at the wheel of his automobile as he drove the car in front of the firm where he was employed. Death was due to heart failure. The car rammed a truck after Altenburg died.

Indigestion May Lead to Apendicitis

Repeated attacks of indigestion often lead to serious inflammation and intestinal tract. This inflammation may finally extend to the appendix, which usually becomes infected through the presence of foul, irritating matter in the bowels.

It doesn't pay to ignore even the most simple warnings of digestive trouble. Neglect is responsible for much misery. Uneasiness at the pit of the stomach, sour taste in the mouth, excessive gas, heartburn, nausea, vomiting, bitter risings, constipation, biliousness, dizzy spells and palpitation of the heart after eating are some common symptoms of poor digestion.

If you are subject to any form of stomach distress, don't fail to try a bottle of Smith Bros.' M. A. C., the guaranteed stomach treatment. This wonderful medicine usually gives prompt relief from all discomfort. In fact, it is sold on a positive guarantee of money back if the first bottle fails to do so. A large bottle costs but $1.25. East Side Pharmacy will supply you. (mail orders accepted.)
