Fishing is Poorer—

Fishing on the lower Rogue is not up to standard at the present time. Fishermen have been reporting poor luck in fishing for the small fellows and steel heads have not yet started to strike. Several reasons are given for the small fellows and steel heads have not yet started to strike. Several reasons are given for the inability to catch the trout. One of them is that the water in the Rogue is too warm. The other is that there is plenty of natural food in the river now, the grubs and crawfish are now so plentiful that the fish can get a square meal without undue labor and are not inclined to raise to a fly.—Courier.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION OPENS TODAY

The country, Representative Burton said, looks to President Coolidge for leadership.

"As a candidate for the presidency and this in the midst of temptations stronger than those by which the angels fell, he has shown no trucking, no scheming for votes, but has gone calmly and steadily on his way unaffected by the lure of expediency or the promise of success," Burton declared.

For the Republican administration, he claimed the following: Prosperity after a period of business and economic depression which followed the war.

Peace with all the world. "The Democrats could not make peace," he said. "The Republicans did."

The arms conference which limited the world's expenditure for armament, established peace in the Pacific and insured an open door in China.

The budget law and economy in government which he said has saved the nation hundreds of millions of dollars.

A tariff law which he claimed has protected industry and added hundreds of millions in revenue to the treasury.

Abolition of the 12-hour working day by the late President Harding.

Tax reduction.

Passage of a foreign debt funding law which has already successfully insured the collection of nearly half the billions loaned to Europe during the war.

An immigration policy that will protect future generations and at the same time permit a steady influx of desirables from the world.

The Dawes plan for settlement of the controversial reparations problem which he declared now bids fair to accomplish the highly desirable result of stabilizing Europe.

For the future he charted this course for the party:

Further tax reduction and reform, along scientific lines as laid down by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

Stricter law enforcement.

Conscription of wealth and labor in time of war as well as human life.

Advancement of the date of the president's inauguration from March 4 to the preceding January 1, in order that the public will earlier accomplish its result in the halls of congress.

Another arms conference as soon as Europe is stabilized and at that state of tranquility that will make possible international agreements.

Adherence to the world court advocated by Harding, Hughes and Coolidge, with the reservations written by the former.

Continued opposition to government ownership and "paternalism" in government and continued adherence to "sane regulation."

There was no direct reference to prohibition, or to the Ku Klux Klan, and as for the bonus, Representative Burton merely stated it was now on the statute books and should be accepted as such.

Concerning the investigations at Washington, which resulted in the unearthing of so much scandal, he said:

"I must enter a solemn protest against the impression that there is widespread corruption at Washington. It is an infamous crime to seek to destroy the confidence of the American people in their government."

Undoubtedly, he said, instances of bribery and corruption had been disclosed, but these were matters of personal, not party responsibility, he declared, and should be punished as such, irrespective of politics or partisan consideration.

rythm. Gurbitt's Viennese waltz by Iris Atterbury and Pixie's Good Night Song by Clara Atterbury were played "in excellent style and manner."

The trio by Lois Goetze, Clarice Crowson and Elizabeth Wolcott was true to Englemann. One could hear the old Mill Wheel by Clarice Crowson and in imagination see the Little Indian Chief played by Lois Goetze.

The ever beautiful Berceuse from Jockey by Godard rendered by Mildred Moss and Nadine Swenning was soothing and quiet. One could imagine Priscilla at the Spinning Wheel played by Elizabeth Wolcott.

Little four-year old Sam Jones Chaney, Jr., captured the house when he sang in fearless, musical voice, Clover Blossoms—his sister, Helen, accompanying him. Sartorio's Herdman's Song by Adah Derrick told a true picture of the shepherd and sheep as he played his haunting tune on the flute.

The Village Festival, bright and gay was played by Bulah Yerian.

Lucresia Borgia by Donizetti had to be omitted on account of illness of Izzetta Taylor. Gurliitt's Peasant's Frolic by Gladys Hamaker was played in perfect style and sway. The Fairy and the Woodman were portrayed by Norma Brower. Verdi's Il Trovatore by Ruby and Adah Derrick was the usual favorite. Mozart's Don Juan and Schuman's Happy Farmer by Elaine Chaney were excellent in rendition. Velma Irene Brower then sang "By Lo Robins" in correct tone of voice accompanied by her sister Norma.

The Melody of Love by Mildred Moss displayed a pretty touch and smooth execution.

In imagination one could see the Wayside Chapel as the weary traveler came upon it in the mountains of Switzerland, played by Helen Chaney.

The opera Der Freischutz rendered by Elaine Chaney, Bulah Yerian and Gladys Hamaker was quite difficult for such young students. The number by Eleanor Swenning was omitted on account of illness.

When Lights Are Low by Helen Chaney and Nadine Swenning was characteristic of Englemann. To a Wild Rose by MacDowell was played with feeling and expression by Irwanda Bateman.

Vera Landing played the Edelweiss with ease, expression and composure.

The closing number Moonlight on the Hudson played by Nadine Swenning, Helen Chaney and Mildred Moss was beautiful as one glided down the river in the moonlight like molten silver through the picturesque valley about which Washington Irving wrote Rip Van Winkle and Addison the beautiful poem, Spacious Firmament on High, taken from the Psalms."

Warblings at Eve by Eugenia Young and Nadine Swenning was difficult but brilliantly played. The Je Suis Pret—Galop Brilliant by Ruby Derrick and Mrs. Goodman was well executed.

Charles Wakefield Cadman's beautiful Love Song was ably rendered by Ruby Derrick.

The Storm by Weber portraying a shepherd and his flock as he quietly plays the flute, then the approach of the storm, the lightning, the thunder, the crash of trees, the falling water, all in turn were produced in a realistic manner by Nadine Swenning.

The closing number Moonlight on the Hudson played by Nadine Swenning, Helen Chaney and Mildred Moss was beautiful as one glided down the river
