MELLON WILL PRESENT NEW TAX MEASURE

Secretary of Treasury Is Already at Work on Bill

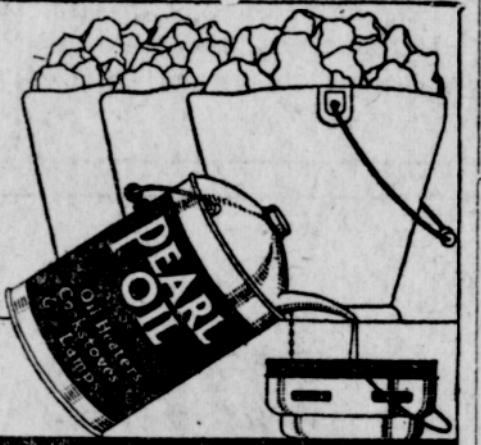

FIRST BILL WAS LOST

Present Rates Are Those Forced By Legislative Power of Democrats

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, whose carefully constructed plan for revision of the revenue laws was torn to shreds by the 68th Congress, has already started work on a new tax plan.

This will be presented to Congress in December with the approval and blessing of President Coolidge—and another great tax fight will be under way.

Between now and the present

Lightens a kitchen task

—One filling lasts for days
—No fuel wasted
—Ready to light

Instead of several heavy loads of coal and wood—one easy filling of Pearl Oil often lasts for days in a good oil cook-stove.

Pearl Oil is easier in every way—always ready, easily controlled, and no over-heated kitchen.

For best results be sure you get the Standard Oil Company's Pearl Oil. It's refined and re-refined kerosene of the highest quality only, absolutely clean-burning, odorless and non-corrosive. Avoid disappointment—order Pearl Oil by name.

tation of the new tax plan will be the Presidential election which will decide, along with a host of other questions, whether the American people favor the revenue ideas of Mr. Coolidge and his secretary of the Treasury, or those of the Democrats, headed by Senator Furnifold Simmons, of North Carolina.

The tax law which is on the statute books today was put there by the Democrats. They wielded the legislative power on Capitol Hill that defeated Mr. Mellon and led to the rejection of his tax scheme. It is true that the tax bill became a law by President Coolidge's signature, but he signed it under duress. A veto would have meant that he would have had to go into the Presidential campaign carrying the stigma of having stood between the people and tax reduction.

Coolidge Protested Signing
So Mr. Coolidge signed the bill, with a denunciation of the "political influences" that led to its enactment, and promised further tax reform at the first opportunity, to wit, the second session of the Sixty-eighth Congress.

As the temper of this Congress, however, will not be much different than that of the last, it is difficult for the impartial observer of this continual row between the executive and legislative branches of the Government to see how the second attempt at "scientific tax revision" is going to succeed.

The deciding factor, of course, and the thing that will govern the whole situation, will be the election. If a Democratic President is elected it will hardly be worth while for President Coolidge to waste his time trying to get Congress to listen to his pleas for tax revision along the lines recommended by Secretary Mellon. But if Coolidge wins there will be every reason in the world for him to go before Congress and, in his most firm and decisive manner, tell it flatly what he wants done.

Would Aid Large Incomes

One of the features of the new tax plan which Mr. Mellon is drafting contemplates further reductions in the taxes on large incomes—those up in the hundreds of thousands and millions. The maximum surtax under the old post-war revenue law was 50 per cent, to which was added the normal income tax of 8 per cent. Mellon wanted this cut 50 per cent, or down to 25 per cent. Congress reduced it only 10 per cent, or to 40 per cent on incomes about $500,000. Mellon's position is that the high surtax makes capital leary of putting cash into profitable enterprise. Mr. Coolidge agrees with him, but the problem is to make Congress see it that way.

The crux of the tax fight will be over this question of surtaxes. Mellon may also recommend some adjustment in the normal income tax rates, in view of the fact that they have been reduced by half, when he recommended a reduction of only one-third.

In the meantime, the Treasury Department is going ahead with the administration of the new revenue law. One of its principal features was the reduction of this year's income taxes 25 per cent. Refunds were to have been made to those who paid all their tax at the beginning of the year—that is, on March 15. Congress failed to make necessary appropriations, so these people will have to wait for at least a year to get their money back.

The Art Of Beauty

By B. M. DOUGLAS

The Flower Woman

SOME one has said that flowers are beautiful things which God made and forgot to put a soul into. How much more beautiful then, is the delicate flower type of woman, who seems to carry with her the shy, fragrant and elusive charm of violets and pansies and lilies of the valley.

The beauty of the flower woman cannot be pinned down to the color of her hair, or her eyes, or the curve of her cheek. It is something fairlike and ethereal. The flower woman is most often delicately blonde, and slender, and graceful. She may have eyes like wood violets, set in faint, black shadows, her skin is pale ivory, her hair, as they used to say in the fairy tales, spungold, her lips are coral. Everything about her is fine and fair, and wistful. She is like a fairy tale princess who has somehow strayed away from her castle.

And so, if the flower woman, to realize her type, she must hold herself somewhat aloof from the fetiches of the throng. Not for her is the rakish little hat, the clinging evening dress, the uncompromising informalism, the betrimmed summer dress. She must make her own fashions, for she is above fashion. Delicate trailing lengths of chiffon, pastel shades, powder blue, pale orchid, peachblow, bluishrose, silver green, ivory white. Large drooping flower hats, transparent brims, organdie, cobwebby lace, soft velvets, all of these will bring out the faint elusive wistful fragrance of her charm. Negligees and tea gowns, scorned by the poor door girl are dear to the flower woman. And jewels—never the hard, bright stones, diamonds, or rubies, or emeralds, but always the purity of pearls, the mystery of opals, the lustrous clearness of aquamarines. And faint perfume, lavender, violet, jasmine, hy of the valley.

Sports and their accompanying apparel are not for the flower woman. They will strike a harsh discordance in the harmony of her type. While her more vivid ruddy sisters may disport themselves on the court, or the links, she will be far better sitting in the shade, under the striped marquee in her filmy gown, and shady hat, ready to welcome the conquering hero.

Makeup must touch the flower woman gently, like the caress of a fairy godmother's wand. Blend delicately outline the wistful curve of her lips with Mandarin lipstick. Her eyes are the keynote of her type. If her brows and lashes are not naturally long, she may delicately pencil them. A dark powder smoothed under the eyes and over the lids intensifying the "natural shadow" around the eyes will add to her mystery and charm. In the evening lavender powder will give a silken sheen to her delicately modelled shoulders.

Health Hints by the Father of Physical Culture

Pride of hair like pride of race is an old human vainglory. Beautiful hair is always healthy hair and healthy hair properly cared for is always beautiful—beautiful because of its luster and elasticity. Venders of tonics and get-hair-quick pomades to the contrary, the chief factors that make for a luxuriant growth of hair are, when all is said and done, just three: Cleanliness, fresh air and a free circulation of the precious life stream to nourish the roots. Perhaps I should have put the last first, but cleanliness and fresh air are so revivifying and preservative that they wrote themselves first.

With these three fundamentals in mind it is really a simple matter to care for the hair and keep it in so healthy a condition that it will be a "thing of beauty" and a "joy forever."

To begin with cleanliness: To obtain a condition of cleanliness of the scalp that is conducive to a good growth of hair, it is not necessary to shampoo or wash the hair with very great frequency.

The shampoo liquids remove (along with the dust and the grime) the natural oil upon which the hair depends for its lustre and elasticity. Thus where the scalp is naturally inclined to dryness these too frequent washings only aggravate the state, in the end leaving the hair thin, dry and brittle.

OIL COMPANIES FIGHT RENO GASOLINE TAX

RENO, Nev., June 20.—Vigorous protests against the proposed municipal gasoline tax of one cent per gallon have been filed with Mayor Roberts and the city council by dealers and managers of the Standard, Shell and other companies.

It is claimed by the objectors that the proposed tax would drive business from the city limits, and the Standard Oil Company has announced it will fight any attempt to levy the tax on gasoline transported through Reno for suburban stations.

The proposed tax is estimated to insure an annual revenue approximating $25,000.

CATTLE EPIDEMIC IS WANING, SAYS CHIEF

SACRAMENTO, June 20.—Dr. John Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry of the United States Department of Agriculture expressed himself as well pleased with the progress made in the fight against the foot and mouth disease in California upon his arrival in Sacramento yesterday from his headquarters in Washington, D. C.

Dr. Mohler said the general situation was vastly improved, and it was due to this condition that he was able to leave his office and come to California to make an inspection at first hand of the eradication forces in charge of Dr. U. G. Houck, representative of the federal bureau of animal industry, was praised by the official.
