JULY 7

THE LORD is the portion of mine inheritance and of my cup: thou maintainest my lot. The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places: yea, I have a goodly heritage.—Psalm 16:5, 6.

THE INTERLOCKING WORLD

Since the rapid development of modern methods of communication and transportation the world has shrunk so that, with the people of the earth continually growing larger, one nation, be it ever so small and apparently insignificant, cannot turn, nor squirm, nor stretch, nor jounce out an elbow without jostling the other nations.

There is a gold and silver element in the flow of this interchanging, here and everywhere active communication of interests. By the sensitive effect upon the gold and silver and the commodities which gold and silver will buy, is seen promptly the result of events were the sole producer or source of one necessary commodity and some disaster should reduce that production to nothing or wipe out that source, when the distributed supply in other lands should become exhausted the world would be affected in business and in living conditions by the famine in that one commodity.

And the same principle applies to nearly all articles of trade. Drought in areas in England has its effect on American business; a strike in England has its effects upon business in South America; legislation touching certain lines in America will mean much to Australia.

A KEY THAT OPENS MANY DOORS

The classified advertisement when published in the daily newspaper not infrequently shows a "pulling power" astonishing even to those who are familiar with what can be accomplished through this agency.

It is not surprising, therefore, to find the classified columns being put to strange uses. One of the most novel is revealed in the report that an eminent psychologist, desirous of making a sociological study of women occupying high school and financial position, used want ads in American and British newspapers as a means of getting into touch with such persons.

This suggests that more extensive use might be made of the classified advertisement as an adjunct to science. If information is desired and there are people who can furnish it, it is practically certain that a want ad will reach them. It may be desired to buy something or sell something, to obtain a situation or to obtain help, to recover something lost or discover the owner of something found; whatever it is, the classified advertisement is likely to bring it within reach if anything can do it.

A SIGNIFICANT INCIDENT OF THE CELEBRATION

Ashland was host to several thousand people during the celebration July 3 and 4, and to the credit of both visitors and the city it can be said that a more orderly crowd of people never assembled at any time or in any place. Not a single accident was recorded. No automobiles collided or were hurled from the highways because of boozecrazed drivers. There was no carousing, yelling or disorderly conduct. Women and children were free to go here and there, unaccompanied, with a feeling of security.

Only those who have lived in other districts where perfect order does not always prevail during occasions such as recently closed here can appreciate the value of this condition. It is no secret that drinking is indulged in in many sections of the country at any and all times, and that during holidays and public events where many people are brought together drunks are common, but Ashland is one exception to the rule. The same condition prevailed during the celebration here a year ago. No accidents were reported. Not a single individual was maimed or killed. No drunks were in evidence and no arrests were reported, proving that law and order here are the rule rather than the exception.

A very practical hot weather costume, is a bath tub full of water.

Only two more income tax payments before Christmas

Many women go visiting hoping the objects of their visit are not at home.

Old Glory always looks good but looks better when flying in a cool, invigorating breeze.

Even the conference of the Progressives at Cleveland are not without their troubles. The Klan issue was catapulted into their midst like a thunder bolt from a clear sky.

With the celebration successfully disposed of Ashland will again return to the hotel project to stick until the improvement becomes a reality.

The fire which threatened the entire Bellview district July 4th, is another practical illustration of the damage that can ensue from carelessly throwing a lighted match, cigar or cigarette from a moving automobile. Only the heroic efforts of many neighbors and friends saved one home, and possibly many others. Grain was destroyed and several hundred acres of grain and pasture threatened. Think three times before you let loose of a match or a cigarette.

POPULARITY OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE

Test Shows Small Country Banks as Well as City Banks Strongly Favorable.

Assertions by some politicians that small banks generally are inimical to the Federal Reserve System were put to the test recently by a committee appointed by John D. Phillips, president of the State Bank Division of the American Bankers' Association by means of a questionnaire sent to 11,000 state banks. The result indicated that an overwhelming majority of them are, in fact, friendly to the System.

To this 4,934 replies were received. Of these 4,024 voted "yes" without qualification, and only 611 voted "no." Further answers still coming in when this tabulation was made indicated the same favorable trend.

The second question asked by Mr. Phillips' committee was: "If you are not a member should contribute to the destruction of the System, would you join?" While the great majority of the state banks are not members of the System, largely for technical reasons, the answers showed that the bulk of those non-members who are eligible to join would do so if such action were necessary to save the System.

RECONSTRUCTION

A man came into a Nebraska bank in the spring of 1922 and asked for financial assistance. His statement prepared in the Service Department showed he was about bankrupt; that he owed $1,200 more than his equipment was worth. He had a farm rented for the year. Further credit had been refused him in his own bank and he was about ready to quit and apply the proceeds from the sale of his equipment to his debts.

The bank's Service Man went with him to his farm and after an examination decided that if the farmer had a half dozen cows and ten brood sows he would probably be able to use his pasture and feed tended crop to advantage. The bank finally loaned him $1,200 for this purpose and took a chattel mortgage on the stock purchased as its security. The bank admitted that ordinarily a loan should not be made like that, but the farm was close to town and the stock could readily be resold.

When the end of the year came around the exact records showed that the family had been well maintained and on half of the cream checks, the other half had been applied on his $560 note at the bank covering the loan for the cows. Five days before the year was up the principal and interest on the note were entirely paid by cream checks. The pigs afforded a net gain of $1,400 after all expenses were paid.

In addition to this financial gain, the farmer was taught the value of a good cow and the necessity of keeping a record of his operations to know which farm operations are profitable. The Farm Service Department of the bank was able to teach this man things he had never dreamed about. It is worth the effort the banks would be called upon to make if each bank could turn out one broken, distressed man into a prosperous one.

ONE MAN KILLED IN DRUNKEN FIGHT

BEND, July 6.—Struck over the head while in a drunken fight at Crescent with two companions, Frank Brown, laborer at the Tyler construction camp on the Klamath Falls-Eugene cut-off received injuries which caused his death last night. The two who were with him were placed under arrest, and early today were taken to Klamath Falls where the inquest was to be held. Their names were not known at Crescent.

COUNCILWOMAN GIVES VIEWS ON CELEBRATION

Ashland, Ore., July 5, 1924. Editor Tidings:—Please allow me through this column to thank the Lithians (fine bunch of fellows they are) for our wonderful celebration. It has been a howling success, socially and financially. From the street parade to the fireworks it was the "best ever", but there was a "fly in the ointment"—the large number of gambling stands operating in direct violation of our state law. I am not an extremist. We need something more than a temperance lecture to draw people to Ashland and entertain our young folks, but we can have a royal good time without breaking the laws of our commonwealth, and, besides, keep our self respect. I took pains to study the situation. The dancing at the pavillion, as far as I could see, seemed to give real pleasure, but as I stood and watched the gambling there was more sorrow than joy. I witnessed much keen disappointment. The Hawaiian dancing was unspeakably vulgar and unworthy of Ashland.

Let us learn a lesson and engage carnivals subject to the closing up of objectionable or lawbreaking features and next Fourth of July, with our Tourist Hotel in operation and the attendant prosperity to our town, let us have a bigger and better celebration.

MOTHER BARBER, The Councilwoman.

UNSCHEDULED EVENTS FEATURE BIG RODEO

KLAMATH FALLS, July 7.—Unscheduled events at the recently ended Klamath Falls rodeo, were plentiful and various. During one day of the celebration, nineteen persons were arrested on the city streets for intoxication. One of the celebrants, Erik Nelson, put one over on police chief Humphrey as he was being escorted from the jail to the police court. When the Chief and five other prisoners turned a corner, Nelson calmly opened a door at the end of the hall and walked outside to freedom. He was not missed until police judge Lem Gaghagen called out the complaint against him.

In response to phone calls from excited residents that a man was trying to climb a telephone pole in his car, the chief of police and fire chief rushed to the scene, and found Andy Peterson asleep in a machine resting against a pole. He was arrested and fined.

NEWS LETTER

LONDON, July 6.—British export service men want more jobs and have launched a fight to get them.

At the annual convention of the British Legion, most of the sessions were given over to discussion of methods of bettering the economic position of men who fought in the World War. Strong resolutions demanding action by the Government were adopted.

It was brought out at the convention that there are approximately 500,000 former service men in the ranks of British unemployed. Captain J. I. Chapman, one of the Legion leaders, outlined an unemployment program which demanded that the Government undertake relief schemes to cost more than $1,000,000,000 to put these men at work.

Compulsory employment by industry of disabled ex-service men was advocated in a resolution which was unanimously approved. This resolution demanded legislation which would require employers to give employment to "a fair percentage of disabled men."

It was also proposed and unanimously approved that the Government be urged to set up a national employment committee of non-partisan and representative character to investigate and recommend employment schemes of public utility commensurate with the present problem of unemployment. A condition of the undertaking of such schemes would be that at least 75 per cent of those employed in carrying them out should be ex-service men. The conference also demanded that no former service men temporarily employed in a Government department should be discharged while non-service men or women are employed.

The convention of the Legion was featured by an address by Colonel Henry D. Lindsley, former National Commander of the American Legion. After extending the greetings of the American ex-service men, Colonel Lindsley extended an unofficial invitation to the Prince of Wales to attend the next convention of the American organization.

"If it should be in the wisdom of the British Government to send the Prince of Wales to the next conference of the American Legion," Colonel Lindsley said, "you would have sent us an Ambassador of Peace unequalled by any that have preceded him. He would receive a welcome over there that has never been extended to any distinguished foreigner. He represents in his personal capacity and in his personality those qualities which English-speaking Americans admire and love."

The British Government is proceeding very cautiously in its handling of the delicate question of the boundaries between the Irish Free State and Ulster. The evident anxiety of the Government to avoid precipitate action is an acknowledgment of the difficult and exceedingly dangerous nature of the problem.

As its latest move in its cautious progress toward a settlement, the Government has decided to set up a judicial committee of Privy Counsellors to inquire into the Government's legal rights under existing laws and treaties. Several distinguished judges from the British Dominions will collaborate with this committee, thus giving it the aspect of Empire authority. It is expected that this committee will begin its task early in July.

The points to be referred to the judicial committee are: Whether, in the absence of a commissioner appointed by the Government of Northern Ireland, a commission within the meaning of Article 12 of the Treaty will have been constituted, or can be competent to determine the boundary under that article;

Whether, if the answer to the first question is negative, it is legal for the Government to instruct the Governor of Northern Ireland to make an appointment, and, if the Governor makes an appointment in pursuance of that instruction, the commission will be duly constituted;

Whether, if the answer to the preceding questions is in the negative, the Government has authority to make an appointment, and if the commission will then be duly constituted;

And, if the answer to all the preceding questions is in the negative, whether there is any constitutional method of bringing the commission into existence so long as the Ulster Government persists in its refusal to name a commissioner.

Thus the prospects of a basis of agreement arising out of the judicial committee's action would seem to be remote.

TRADE RECORD HIGHER PRICES IN INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Manufacturing materials and manufactures show advances. Wheat, fruits and pork products go at lower prices, other food stuffs at an advance. Petroleum products show lower export prices but increased quantities exported. Higher prices at home and abroad characterized the 1923 import and export trade of the United States. While the advance is less striking than in many earlier years it is still true that the monthly average prices in considerably more than one-half of the representative articles entering and leaving the country were higher in December 1923 than in the corresponding month of 1922.
