To Seattle—

Mrs. A. T. Edmunson well known Ashland resident, with her daughter Bertha, left recently with her son Oswald Sanford, of Seattle, for a visit with relatives in Bremerton and Seattle. She plans on a visit of indefinite length.

Guest Here—

Chalmers Strange, of Portland, arrived in Ashland recently, and is visiting at the homes of Mrs. Jesse Neil and of Mrs. E. McCarthy. He plans to remain here a short time. Mr. Strange is well known in Ashland, and has many friends here.

Motored Over—

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wood and son Hugh, and Mr. and Mrs. John Linfesty, of Merrill, drove to Ashland and Grants Pass Saturday night, stopping here Sunday and returning to their home Sunday evening. The trip was in the nature of a short outing.

Many at Camp—

An increase in the number of automobiles at the city camp ground was noticeable last night, when 98 were registered. The tourist travel is growing rapidly and the peak is not believed to have yet been reached — Grants Pass Courier.

Going To Portland—

Among the travelers that passed through here yesterday that are making Portland their mecca, are J. E. Shelton, of Los Angeles, who is going to locate in the Willamette valley; C. Gordon Limpset, Victoria, B. C. man who is returning from California, and who is going to stop a month at the Oregon metropolis; and Charles F. Sells, of Riverside, California, who is connected with the Portland Oregonian.

Thrilling Time—

Dr. Paul Noel reports a rather thrilling time while attending an out of town dance Saturday night. Dr. Noel was answering an urgent call and just as he stepped outside the hall a man stuck a gun in his ribs and told him to stick 'em up. Dr. Noel stuck 'em up, but somehow or other, on the way up his hand accidentally connected with the bandits chin and the doctor cleared out at a pretty good pace. He even overlooked the fact that the hold-up man might have been a good patient when he came to. — Klamath News.

Back To Portland—

Mrs. Frank G. Allard, and daughter, Francis, left Sunday night for their home in Portland. They have been visiting with Mrs. W. J. Wallace of Mountain Avenue, and with Mrs. W. H. Mowat. Miss Allard came from Portland with Mr. and Mrs. Wallace several weeks ago, and Mrs. Allard joined her here later. They stopped here two weeks. Mr. Allard is well known to local residents, as he was formerly forman of the Southern Pacific roundhouse here.

Wisconsin Man Visits—

J. C. Copeland, of Grand Rapids, Wisconsin, is in Ashland today visiting friends.

To Canada—

A California man who is going to Canada for a vacation is Alfred Anderson, Santa Maria business man, who stopped here yesterday to sample the Lithia water.

176 Registered Yesterday—

Yesterday only 176 out-of-state tourists registered at the local bureau, which is considered only a very ordinary registration day here. While Klamath Falls is proud of a high mark of nearly fifty motorists in one day, and Medford boasts of registering 200 in two days, Ashland daily registers between 150 and 225 travelers.

Surprised By Friends—

Mr. and Mrs. L. Miksch were surprised recently by the arrival of friends from California when Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Huebner, with their son and his wife and child, Donald, came to Ashland. After a short visit, the Huebner family left yesterday to visit Crater Lake. They plan to take the round-trip route, going by way of Klamath Falls and returning by way of Medford.

Back to Oakland—

Mr. and Mrs. Blaine Klum, and daughter, Lael, left today for their home in Oakland, after a short visit with Mrs. C. L. Loomis and other Ashland residents. They are returning over the new Redwoods highway instead of down the Pacific highway, which is usually traveled.

Here Yesterday—

Sheriff Terrill, of Jacksonville, was in Ashland Monday in an official capacity. He returned to the county seat the same evening.

From Walla Walla—

Everett Gillings of Walla Walla, arrived in Ashland last night to visit his brother, E. O. Gillings. The visitor plans to remain in Ashland for a week or ten days.

From British Columbia—

From British Columbia, and going home as fast as the law allows is R. F. Bennett, who last night stopped at the Ashland auto camp. Bennett has been spending the winter in southern California, and is now returning to his home for a cool summer.

Seattle Man Here—

A. C. Butt, of Seattle, who has been on a short vacation down South is in Ashland today resting. Before leaving Los Angeles, he planned to break the return trip into two sections, spending a day of rest. As he had passed through Ashland on his way to California, he decided to stop here for a day.

From Arizona—

Arizona was well represented at the Ashland auto camp last night by four tourist cars, one driven by Ted Rodney, one by P. E. Phillips, one by R. M. Marshall and the other by John Olden. All four were in different parties, and hailed from different parts of the camp. Three were going North and one was driving into California.

Here Two Days—

Alfred E. Archibald and Mrs. Bessie Archibald, of Corvallis, accompanied by Paul Snook and Miss Mildred Bratton, of Eugene, were house guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Spencer over July 4th and 5th.

Mr. and Mrs. Archibald are the parents of Mrs. Spencer. The Spencers, with their guests and Mrs. Mildred Epperly visited the J. A. Archibald family at Kerby, Oregon, on Sunday, and also saw the Oregon caves, returning home late Sunday night. All report a splendid trip.

Arrived Monday—

Mrs. F. Stevenson, who lives near Grants Pass, and who is a former Ashland woman, arrived here Monday, and plans to stay a week. She is here for the benefit of her health.

To Tacoma—

Mrs. Runa De Wees, an Ashland resident for eighteen years, left Saturday night for Salem with her daughter, Mrs. Stanton. After a short visit in Salem, Mrs. De Wees will go to Tacoma, where she will live with her son, Frank. Mrs. De Wees sold her Ashland home to E. E. Hewitt, of Factory street.

McADOO AND SMITH QUIT TORRID RACE

Davis had scarcely been seated when President Wilson appointed him Solicitor-General to the Department of Justice. His associates declared Davis made the best record of all the men who had appeared in the Supreme Court for the Department.

A tall, slender man with a shock of almost snow-white hair, a slow and gentle smile, and the general air of a student listened gravely while two assistants to the U. S. Attorney General outlined their views on a legal point which was the crux of a case pending in the Supreme Court.

Finally, they paused. The Solicitor General of the United States smiled, then rendered his decision.

"That sounds mighty fine, gentlemen; now, if one of you will loan me a pipeful of tobacco, both your lengthy arguments will be forgiven."

This incident happened when Davis was forty-five years old, and at the time he had more experience with big law cases than most lawyers of seventy can point to.

Won Noted Cases.

Celebrated cases he won were what was known as "The Pipe Line Case," a decision which compelled oil companies to post their schedules and to adhere to them with respect to all well owners, the income tax law of 1913, the ship subsidy case, the Adamson eight-hour law, the Selective Draft Act of 1917, and many others.

The long-suffering justices are said to have found him a joy which they hoped in vain would endure forever. One trait appealed to them. Davis would consent to long speeches by the opposition, but he could not tolerate the thought of one by himself. One of his practices was to let his opponents lull the court to sleep under a blanket of verbiage. Then, with a short, concise definition of the issue, delivered in the rapid, searching style for which he will always be remembered in the Supreme Court he would rouse the justices to wide-eyed wakefulness.

During his term as Ambassador, which began in November, 1918, it was said in London Davis was one of the most popular and highly esteemed diplomats who had represented the United States in many years.

On the eve of his departure he was the guest of honor of the Pilgrims' Society and London newspapers characterized the gathering as among the most notable ever assembled for the purpose of bidding farewell to an American diplomat in England. The Prince of Wales and Lords Curzon, Reading and Desbrough paid tribute to Davis as "one of the most illustrious in the line of American Ambassadors in the last quarter century."

Attacks Reds

Replying to the eulogistic speeches, Davis thanked the speakers and then declared that "recent events had proved militarism to be a danger and not a safeguard." Branding Communism as "an ignoble fraud," the Ambassador devoted most of his speech to Anglo-American relations.

Davis is a "good mixer." He has had enough of the rough-and-tumble of politics to keep him out of the exquisite class, despite a certain perfection in dress and distinction in appearance.

His first laurels in Congress were won as prosecutor of Judge Archibald, of Pennsylvania, who was impeached in the Senate.

He framed the principal provision in the Webb-Kenyon Act to prohibit shipments of liquor in interstate commerce to dry territory.

When he was twelve he was urged by school officials to take the examination for teacher in the Clarksburg public schools, but declined on advice of his father.

When he was twenty-one he was offered the presidency of the Washington and Lee University, from which he had just graduated.

When he was thirty-three he was elected president of the West Virginia Bar Association.

Taught By Mother

His mother was a native of Baltimore, and she has told how,

when she undertook his education, he used to roll on the floor at night, reciting his lessons as he rolled.

He was born in Clarksburg, April 13, where his father was eminent as a churchman and lawyer.

After "graduating from his mother's 'school'" he attended two boarding schools, in one of which he was one of two male students in a large class of girls.

Noted for his studiousness and bashfulness, he devoted most of his time to books. Members of his family credit him with saying he would rather walk three blocks out of his way than to meet a girl acquaintance.

They declare that at George Young's boarding school — where the students were all girls except Davis and another boy — he was cured of his bashfulness.

At the age of thirteen he entered Pantops Academy, a preparatory school at Charlottesville, Va. At sixteen he graduated and entered Washington and Lee University.

He was graduated from the University in 1892 with the degree of bachelor of arts. In 1905 the institution conferred the degree of bachelor of law upon him.

He then returned to Clarksburg and was admitted to the bar. The following year Washington and Lee called him back to serve as an assistant professor of law, a position he filled for one year.

Father Law Partner

Returning to Clarksburg he formed a law partnership with his father and practiced his profession until he made his first venture into public life in 1899, when he was elected to the State Legislature on the Democratic ticket. As an immediate recognition of his legal knowledge he was made chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

After serving one term Mr. Davis retired from politics and in accordance with the expressed wishes of his father, who was, to quote him, "sick of politics" and determined to keep his son in a law office, refused the importunities of party leaders to re-enter the political field.

He did, however, represent West Virginia as a delegate to the National Democratic conventions in 1904 and 1908.

President Wilson in the Summer of 1918 selected Mr. Davis to represent the United States on a commission to negotiate with Germany the treatment and exchange of war prisoners. When the armistice was signed the commission was sitting at Berne,

Switzerland. About to return to America, announcement of the resignation of Walter Hines Page as Ambassador to the Court of St. James was made, and President Wilson cabled him a proffer of the post, which he accepted.

Mr. Davis is a former president of the American Bar Association, a member of college fraternities, the Masons, Elks and Woodmen. His first wife was Julia T. McDonald, who died in 1900, leaving one daughter, Julia McDonald Davis. In 1912 he married Miss Ellen G. Bassel, and to this union one daughter, Ruth, was born.

OREGON WILL VOTE ON 8 MEASURES AT COMING ELECTION

SALEM, July 8. — The ballot at the November election will contain four initiative and four referendum measures according to developments yesterday, which was the last day allowed by law for filing completed initiative petitions with the secretary of state. Of the referendum measures three were referred to the people by the legislature and on one the referendum was invoked by the people at the instance of Associated Industries of Oregon. This latter measure is the act prohibiting the sale of milk and butter substitutes and is known as the oleo-margarine and condensed milk bill.

The measures referred by the legislature are: A measure requiring a literacy test for voters; an amendment measure providing for the condemnation of roads and highways for the transportation of materials beneficial to irrigation and drainage; and a proposed amendment to the state bonus and loan act extending its benefits to veterans of the Spanish-American war.

The four initiative measures that will go on the ballot, completed petitions having been filed, are: A measure providing for a board of naturopathic examiners; a measure making operation under the workmen's compensation act compulsory, initiated by the Oregon Workmen's Compensation league; a measure initiated by C. C. Chapman for the repeal of the state income tax; and a bill to abolish the public service commission.

On seven initiative measures petitions were not completed and they will not go on the ballot. These are: Occupational representation bill, providing for abolition in the state senate and representation in the legislature by occupations instead of by political parties; single tax bill; interest rate amendment; school district voters' qualification bill; state grange income tax bill, and an anti-capital punishment measure.

In view of developments concerning a state income tax, it looks as if such a law in Oregon is in jeopardy. While the grange income tax act, which is approved by Governor Pierce, failed to receive the necessary number of signatures to go on the ballot, C. C. Chapman's measure providing for the repeal of the present
