KID MCCOY HAS INSANE OUTBURST

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19. — As District Attorney Keyes went before the Grand Jury today, asking the indictment of "Kid" McCoy for the murder of Mrs. Teresa Mors, McCoy went on a rampage in the city jail, throwing things in his cell right and left, and was apparently utterly insane. The jail was filled with his cries. The former ring idol, who was yesterday pronounced sane, violently shook the bars of the jail and refused to answer when asked what he was doing. Bits of paper in strange forms were taken from his cell, causing the former ring idol to cry and beg for their return, police said.

Raving Maniac
Jailers said he yelled and screamed during the night, keeping the other prisoners awake. If he becomes more violent, he will be taken to the receiving hospital for examination, and will be put under restraint, the police stated today. If official circles, McCoy's actions have been regarded as a clever ruse to convince the world that he is subject to insane spells, and while this possibility is admitted, it is not regarded seriously.

The improvements will include clearing much of the land, installation of a water system and painting and repairing the buildings. Champeog park is one of the popular recreation centers in the willamette valley, and for many years has been the scene of an annual reunion of Oregon pioneers. Judge D'Arcy, prominent resident of Salem and for many years active in pioneer circles, will have charge of the improvements.

Million Persons Ill Daily Through Health Carelessness

THE alarming increase in infectious diseases throughout the country has stirred national, state and municipal health authorities to extraordinary activity to stem the tide of sickness and remove the causes of death. The officials seeking to prevent this wide spread of illness are calling upon the public to aid them in their fight, because most of the disease now rampant is with the germs so obtained. Five developed abscesses, six became very ill and two died, one of a pus infection and the other of typical diphtheria.

due mainly to public carelessness or neglect of ordinary precautions. In the opinion of Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Commissioner of Health in Chicago, there are on an average 3,000,000 persons ill all the time. He says that forty-two per cent of this illness is preventable, which means that every day there are over a million men, women or children shut in and suffering when they could be healthy and happy had they applied personal sanitary measures.

The recent announcement of the United States Public Health Service that smallpox has had outbreaks in thirty-five States has called attention to the fact that most of the cases of this disease are carried from one city to another and from one State to another by sufferers who fail to take proper protective measures. It has been found that much of the communication of diseases is due to carelessness in the use of drinking vessels. An investigation in Chicago, reported to the General Health Bureau, gave the results of analysis of twenty common cups or glasses. Nine were taken from schools, three from hotels, five from railroad depots, two from stores, and one from a children's home. All of these revealed the presence of germs to a dangerous degree. It was evident that these glasses carried virus that would spread pneumonia, diphtheria, influenza and other general and contagious diseases. The Chicago bacteriologists infected guinea pigs with the germs so obtained. Five developed abscesses, six became very ill and two died, one of a pus infection and the other of typical diphtheria.

important than direct. Perhaps the use of a common glass for drinking is the best example of a mode of indirect contact. It was also the first which the public learned to appreciate and avoid. The common drinking glass is going, but unfortunately has by no means gone. Even if the Board of Health neglects to enforce the law against it, no one need use it. That is within one's absolute control.

There are many persons who will not water a horse at a public fountain for fear of glanders who will themselves drink out of anything. Because of the agency of the common glass in the spread of the diseases that now are taking their toll in sickness and death the local health authorities are directing their first steps toward the detection of those violating the law forbidding its use. Forty-four States have such laws, and these are supplemented in many cases by municipal ordinances. Because of the great number of public places, soda fountains, schools, railroad stations, theatres, hotels, restaurants and other places where these are used, it generally is impossible to cover the whole territory except at long intervals. For this reason most of the health boards are asking the public to aid them in their campaign by reporting such violations as come to their notice.

It is hoped through this means to remove the peril that lies in the path of children who are too young to discriminate or care, or adults who are thoughtless or neglectful of the comfort and health of others. Many civic organizations, such as the Parent-Teacher Association, settlement houses, Chambers of Commerce and other groups are working with health officials to eradicate the menace to health. The application of united effort to this step, it is believed, will heavily reduce the illness that now needlessly claims one million persons each day.

TWO WIVES

ONE OLD AND ONE YOUNG SCANDALIZE SAN RAFAEL BY LIFE IN HARMONY IN

SAME HOME

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 18.—Two women who love the same man — one the tired, dying wife who has worked by his side for fifteen years, and the other a sparkling, fresh-skinned girl of 20, now wife No. 2—are standing hand in hand presenting a solid front to the critical world in San Rafael.

Neither the rightful Mrs. Marius A. Miller, wife of Marius A. Miller, San Rafael contractor, nor Mrs. Miller, the second, the youthful bigamous wife of six days seem to realize or care for the storm of public opinion they have aroused since the suburban town learned of Miller's second marriage.

One Home For Two Wives

In her bed yesterday lay the ailing wife, Mrs. Miller, No. 1, whom the doctors said can live but a few months. Pitifully old and ill she looked. Miller is 41 and his wife a year or two younger, but years of suffering from heart trouble has prematurely aged her.

By her side, busying herself with details of care for the sick woman, was Mrs. Miller No. 2, the young nurse who has cared for the wife for several months, and who slipped away to Santa Rosa last Saturday and was married to her employer.

"Living Our Own Lives"
"We have just one thing to say to the world in general," the two women said almost in chorus; "and that is, why does every one interfere and make trouble for us. We are not harming any one; we are living our own lives and are happy and understand each other."

The younger woman is the widow of a war veteran who died last January. She has a few months old baby.

Husband Blames Liquor
Miller himself is very reticent to discuss the affair. "I was intoxicated when the marriage ceremony was performed," he said.

In the meantime until the preliminary hearing is held before Justice of the Peace De La Montanya the strange quartet will continue to live in the Miller home.
