One of the machine guns, the blank cartridges for the machine guns and rifles, flares, smoke candles and rockets to be used on the sham battle at the fair on the evening of September 12, have been received at Medford. The other machine guns will arrive in a few days. Capt. Cowgill is making the necessary arrangements for this occasion which occurs on national defense day and is ordered by the government.

SHASTA COUNTY HAS LIGHT SNOW FALL
WHITMORE, Calif., Aug. 21.—The rain of Monday tapered off into snow late in the day and there were two inches of snow on the Tamarack Road Summit between here and Burney yesterday morning.
WEED, Aug. 21.—Snow fell on Mount Shasta Monday, the mountain being white well below the timber line.
Snow also fell on Mount Eddy, the forest service lookout advising by phone that the thermometer registered 26 degrees above zero and the snow falling heavily.

ARMENIAN CHILD HERE LAST NIGHT
A large crowd met at the Presbyterian church last night to hear Mrs. Gannaway of Bel Ruit, Syria and to see the little Armenian waif, Zadi, who has been adopted by her. Mrs. Gannaway spoke on the Near East problem, stating that fifty-four thousand children were being cared for by the Near East Relief Association. She stated some very interesting facts in regard to this work and then presented the little Armenian girl. The waif is four years old and is only a representative of the fifty-four thousand other Armenian children who are being fed and clothed by the Near East Relief.
This small child sang "America" and several other songs beside giving several recitations, much to the delight of the audience.
It was announced today by Rev. Mergler that Mr. J. H. Handsaker of Portland will be in town soon to plan for the fall Near East Relief campaign.

NEVADA MISSED BY RECENT RAIN
RENO, Nev., Aug. 21.—Expecting heavy showers on Mount Rose and Slide Mountain, the storm which broke the drought in many California sections passed over Nevada without any precipitation. Weather bureau officials say there is still a chance for showers, but little promise of heavy rain.
Slight frosts have been reported this week from Fernley, points near Reno, and other valley areas, but no damage was caused.
Fossil—Wheeler county awarded contract for grading 3 miles of Service Creek-Mitchell market road.

NEW WAR PLANE TO FLY WITHOUT PILOT
LONDON, August 21.—Experiments are being energetically pursued by the research departments of the British Air Ministry into the perfecting of small motor-driven, pilotless aeroplanes for warfare uses.
Research shop experiments have shown that it is possible for one of these small machines to be controlled in flights extending for one hundred miles by wireless signals from land stations.
A pilotless aeroplane can be made to take off automatically and climb into the air, with as much certainty as if a pilot were aboard, by the air pressure of its motion setting a small two-bladed screw revolving. As soon as the forward motion causes the screw to revolve at a certain number of revolutions a minute it operates a gear which inclines the rear elevators at an angle which causes the machine to rise gradually.
When it has attained some predetermined height another automatic device checks its ascent and sends it forward on a horizontal path.

Wireless has solved the problem of how to enable the machine to alight safely. As the machine nears the aerodrome an operator on the ground taps out a signal which causes a wire, weighted at the end, to unroll itself from the bottom of the plane.
The weight at the bottom of the wire comes in contact with the surface of the aerodrome some seconds before the aeroplane itself touches the ground and causes the controls to set themselves for a smooth and safe landing.
In time of war it is understood that these aeroplanes could be loaded with high explosives, which they could discharge at some predetermined spot.

SAYS JUMPING FROG TALE BASED ON FACT
FORT WORTH, Texas, August 21.—What the Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina may have been an epochal bit of conversation, but what the Governor of Nevada said to the Governor of Texas (which was overheard by W. A. Adair, editor of the Marshall Messenger) may determine conclusively the authority of Mark Twain's jumping frog story.
Upon reading a news dispatch from Lodi, California, of a frog that, through greedy consumption of several dozen ball bearings, was unable to jump, Adair felt the urge to fasten the stamp of veracity upon Twain's humorous yarn of a similar vein. The dispatch from California had once again revived the time-worn topic, was Twain's frog story fiction or fact?
Adair offers the following as unbiased testimony:
"I have heard the late Governor Jewett W. Adams, of Nevada, relate in detail this jumping frog story and can vouch for its authenticity. Governor Adams said that at the time Mark Twain secured the material for his famous story a certain gambler from Texas named Crawford owned the illustrious frog.
"One rainy day, when everything was dull, Twain proposed to play a joke on Crawford and his 'General Jackson,' the champion jumping frog.
"Twain, in the presence of the remarkable frog's owner, made some very slighting remarks as to the frog's jumping abilities, which immediately led to a wager that he (Twain) could go down the gulch and the first frog he could catch could beat 'General Jackson' in a jumping match.

"To enforce the perfect legality of the contest, Twain insisted that Crawford accompany him to the gulch to witness the catching of the tramp frog that he could see for himself that he had not been 'cold decked' if the 'General' was defeated.
"Immediately after Crawford and his companion left to apprehend the contesting frog, the men left in the cabin began rolling small shot at the frog, and, mistaking them for something to eat, the frog swallowed the metal pellets as fast as they were given to him. As a result 'General Jackson' soon had so much ballast he could hardly lift himself from the floor. Needless to say he lost the great jumping classic.
"In later years Mark Twain wrote the well-known story, sticking very closely to the facts. Jewett W. Adams was later Governor of Nevada and superintendent of the Mint after his gubernatorial experience. He was a close friend of Twain and was capable of relating the actual facts that based a number of Mark Twain's humorous works."

utes and 22 seconds.
Should science declare tomorrow that there are definite signs of vegetation, the theories regarding the existence of a form of man—some sort of an intelligent being—would be greatly strengthened in the belief of biologists.
The one great fact concerning Mars that has such a hold on the popular imagination—the far-famed canals—is the subject on which astronomers are universally agreed. They are not man-made, science believes, but rather are due probably to some peculiar natural phenomenon.
The fact that they are so large and frequently intersect without increasing or diminishing in width has caused astronomers to agree that they cannot possibly be irrigation ditches.
