CAMP GROUND DEVELOPMENT

Great credit is due the Ashland park board for the manner in which the new development in the auto camp ground has been forwarded to a splendid consummation.

The dedicatory ceremonies Friday night were fitting and beautiful—only such as can be staged by the wide-awake, Progressive Lithians—and made a fine impression on citizens present, as well as the large number of tourists who left their camps to attend the ceremony.

The program was well carried out. The history of Old Pilot Rock by Professor Briscoe was especially well received. The music was good and all of the addresses timely and fitting.

We feel that among all the individuals who have contributed time and talent to the park enterprise in the past that Frank Jordan is due more credit than any. He has stuck to the job inseason and out. Scarcely a night has passed during the past four years that he has not spent an hour or more at the camp looking personally after the comfort of the visitors and the days he has taken from his private affairs—all without compensation—could be numbered in the hundreds. Such unselfish service by citizens like Frank Jordan is contributing tremendously to the splendid success of Ashland's resort ambitions and deserves recognition and appreciation of citizens generally.

SMALL-TOWN OPPORTUNITIES

The nomination of candidates by the two major parties who are natives of small towns or rural communities has inspired many writers to discourse on the advantages of life and early training in a small town.

In this connection, following some comments from an article by Mark Sullivan, famous political writer, The Salem Journal states editorially:

"This calls attention again to the opportunities of the small town. No matter what the profession or occupation, the small town offers superior advantages to the ambitious young man over the city, because he secures an all around experience and thorough training that serves as a firm foundation for his future career, while in the city he must specialize along certain lines to attract attention, and therefore slight the fundamentals.

"If the youth is going into the professions, into merchandising, into banking, into contracting, into newspaperdom, or any of the occupations, he learns every branch of the business, even as an employe, in the small town, for frequently he is a general factotum, while in the city, his activities are confined to a single department. When the time comes to branch out for himself, he has acquired a thorough knowledge of fundamentals, impossible to obtain in great establishments. That is why the leaders of the city are usually graduates of the country.

"Of course, the youth's future rests upon himself rather than his environment. If he does not have it in him, he will never get very far, no matter what his opportunities. But other things being equal the small town product has a basic advantage over the city product."

Realizing this, one cannot help but deplore the tendency of youth to rush to the cities, where opportunities are curtailed, development stunted and individuality submerged, as they are relentlessly ground into cogs in a big machine, in the process of which, all too frequently, they miss the training, fail to develop the capacity, and are deprived of the opportunities of becoming the machine's engineer.

AFTER LONG NEGLECT

Why is $581,000 of inheritance tax uncollected in Oregon? Why is it that there are 845 inheritance tax cases pending in Oregon and only 200 pending in the state of Washington?

Of the 845 cases in Oregon, 137 originated between 1906 and 1920. If an estate is big enough to be subject to inheritance tax, it is big enough to pay the tax. How extraordinary then that uncollected inheritance taxes due the state date back as far as 1906, or even as far back as 1920? With some inheritance taxes uncollected and delinquent for 18 years, a question that arises is, how in all that long period has the state treasurer's office been functioning?

State Treasurer Jefferson Myers has assigned Attorney Frank Severs to the task of bringing order into this chaos in the state inheritance tax department. It is an effort to bring to the state the long neglected $581,000 of uncollected taxes and put it into use in helping cut down next year's state levy. It is the course that would long ago have been taken by any private business. It is a good rule to apply also to public business—Oregon Journal.

ENTITLED TO CREDIT

All records for gasoline consumption were broken during June when American refineries supplied a combined foreign and domestic demand totaling 802,000,000 gallons. Of this amount the United States consumed 687,000,000 gallons.

One remarkable thing about the oil industry is that in spite of the sensational charges made that various companies demand exorbitant prices for petroleum products, the actual increase in the cost of these products over a period of years shows less variation than other products subject to rapid price fluctuation due to market conditions.

That oil companies have been alive to necessity of developing new sources of crude oil supplies is evidenced by the fact that June was the first month since October when excess of consumption over production cut into stored stocks.

While the oil industry, like every other industry, is subject to improvement, it at least should be given credit for furnishing the American people cheaper gasoline and oil products than any other country in the world.

All the cuckoos aren't in clocks.

Most of the plug cut is now consumed in the districts where dancing is still considered a vice.

As a rule, soft jobs end in hard luck.

In an argument, the man who is wrong, and knows it, always talks louder than his opponent.

Ho hum, just about time for another sensational murder.

THE WILD WEST INSPIRES A GOWN

PERHAPS the recent importation of the rodeo to the East as a form of thrilling entertainment is responsible for the cowboy—or should we say cowgirl—touch in the bright red and black printed kerchief tied around the neck of this black velvet gown. Of course it is a little difficult to imagine a rodeo conducted in velvet, but then, on the other hand, do not our Mexican cousins wear black velvet trousers on such occasions?

DISABLED VETERANS FAVOR DEFENSE DAY

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25.—Frank J. Irwin, National Commander of the "Disabled American Veterans of the World War," commenting on Defense Test Day of September 12, has issued the following statement:

"We went on record at our National Convention heartily endorsing such a program, and this action is significant coming from an organization whose members still bear the scars of conflict."

These disabled veterans realize that many of their scars would not be present today had our country been prepared in 1917. Commander Quinn of the American Legion expresses the same sentiment.

These organizations are supporting the "Defense Test" not because they love war, but because they hate it. They know that unpreparedness has failed to prevent war, but has not failed to make them costly. They know that peace and country are priceless possessions which must be treasured and securely guarded. They are neither blind nor deaf to the lessons of history or the realities of today.

"If a Printing Concern has more than one price—if any of its customers are given printing for less than what is charged other customers—someone pays too much."

THE MYSTIC HOUR

One Pleasant Dream By Alonzo Gissing

Illustrated By a Phantasy

Last night as I lay on my pillow, last night as I lay on my bed, I felt a darn funny sensation, and my eyes near popped out of my head. For I saw a benevolent codger, whose beard was all straggly and gray. There was a big crowd all around him, for he was throwing good money away.

I ran in an excited manner to where this old gent threw his cash. I scrambled among all the others, in a manner unseemly and rash. I grabbed a big handful of greenbacks, I got a jolt and began to see red. Then I awoke on the cold floor, got up and climbed back into bed.

STILL NEED PERMITS

While the rains of the early part of the week lessened greatly the danger from forest fires, the officials of the Crater National forest call attention of deer hunters to the fact that it is still necessary to procure camp fire permits if a camp is to be made on the national forest land.

THIRD PARTY NOT TO ENDORSE STATE OFFICE ASPIRANTS

PORTLAND, Aug. 25.—Representatives of all the groups supporting the La Follette and Wheeler ticket in Oregon were called together at State Headquarters last week by State Campaign Manager Ernest Kroner and agreed upon a policy of supporting the National ticket exclusively and making no endorsement of old party candidates and not to name a separate state ticket.
