LEGISLATION TO ASK REFUND ON DOUBLE TAXATION

PORTLAND, Sept. 20—A refund of all sums paid by Oregon corporations or their stockholders, when such payments constitute double taxation, will be recommended to the coming session of the legislature by the state tax commission, according to Earl Fisher, state tax commissioner.

When the income tax law, was drafted by the legislature of 1923 an effort was made to insure the collection of the tax on earnings made by non-resident stockholders of corporations doing business in Oregon. This was the proviso invalidated by the McCourt decision. It provided, in substance, that an Oregon corporation doing business in the state, should consider dividends paid to resident stockholders as a deduction in the establishment of net taxable income, but that, in the case of dividends paid to non-resident stockholders, the tax should be paid at the source by the corporation.

C. H. PIERCE ANNOUNCEMENT

Although urged by many friends to run for the office of mayor, I have until recently hesitated about doing so for various reasons. Having decided to stand for election my enthusiasm is now strong and if elected I shall make this work my main concern and shall give the best I have in serving the city.

I take this opportunity to pay tribute to Mr. O. H. Johnson as a good citizen and efficient former mayor of Ashland, and to urge every voter who cannot find a real good reason in his mind why he should vote for me to vote for Mr. Johnson for the office.

If defeated, I shall have no feeling or resentment whatever. It is not my intention to make any campaign or to ask any person to vote for me. Though deeply interested in the general progress of Ashland, in better streets, extended lighting system, more scenic drives, our park and auto camp, etc. I feel the solution of the water question to be the paramount issue in the coming city election. I therefore pledge myself to immediate careful and complete investigation by competent engineers of every possibility of water and power development in Ashland creek canyon, and the broadcasting of reports, maps and information in connection therewith to every resident.

Assuming that such complete data will show up some practical method of developing sufficient water and power from the canyon, and believing as I do that every detail should now be ascertained and made public, even if the probable cost does run considerably higher than the early preliminary estimates, that the people may have opportunity to vote on some definite proposition, I should bend every effort as mayor or to get this subject up for a vote of the people at the earliest possible date. If the Ashland voters will then vote a definite sum for a definite water program in the canyon I shall be pleased to do all possible as city executive to secure the rapid completion of such a project at the minimum cost.

It seems to me particularly urgent at this time to elect a real business council to back up whoever may be elected your mayor. To handle perhaps a half million dollars of city funds in a two year period is no light matter, and if finally decided to do so your city guardians should have an extra large majority indorsement by vote of the people and every assurance of confidence and harmony in our ranks.

Any program of water development in the canyon would seem to suggest a considerable increase in our water and light rates, and might even increase our city taxes. The public is entitled to have every bit of information as to these features carefully worked out in advance and then to have the final say by popular vote.

My mind is already made up if elected to work out these problems in a thoroughly businesslike way and not to be swept off my feet by misguided enthusiasm coming from any quarter. Otherwise I should much prefer an honorable defeat in the November election.

If any definite plan shall be sanctioned by the people I should construe this to be a command for rapid aggressive action and should at once try to measure up to the situation with the aid and advice of a good council.

CHARLES H. PIERCE—Adv.

LA FOLLETTE STRENGTH SURPRISE IN DIGEST VOTE

College. "The situation is further complicated by such electoral anomalies as the fact that Georgia, with a popular vote of 154,049 in the last election, has fourteen electoral votes, while New Jersey, with 908,638, has precisely the same number. Thus the North-

State may be balanced in the Electoral College by a Southern State with about one-sixth as many voting citizens."

Each ballot requested the voter's political preference at the last Presidential election and these are also tabulated in this issue of The Digest and analyzed for comparison.

8200 MILES IN TRIP BY LOCAL PARTY

every direction were gone and we had to go two hundred miles out of the way to get through.

We found the best roads and the best marked roads in Minnesota than in any state we passed through. No advertising is permitted along the highway except such as to point the stranger his way. Through western Iowa, northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin small grain was good, but corn was backward owing to so much rain that farmers could not plant early and in many places could not get onto the land to cultivate it, and many fields were given up to weeds.

We spent six delightful weeks with relatives and started for Texas the 8th of August. In those six weeks quite a change had taken place; corn, instead of being a few inches high, was six feet tall, and the grain that looked so fine was mostly blown down or moulding in the shock.

As we drove into Ankeny, near Des Moines, Iowa, every telegraph pole was down for a mile. We inquired if there was a camp ground, and was told there was if we could get into it; that a cyclone had passed through there and the strange part of it was that it took telegraph poles and trees, damaging only one house.

We drove to the camp ground but could not get in for the fallen trees which lay in every direction, so we made camp on a vacant lot. The same wind demolished Tracy, Iowa, and done damage in several other places.

We passed through Atchinson, Topeka, Leavenworth, and Tonganoxie, Kansas, where Mr. Freeberg was in business forty years ago. He met a few of his old friends still living there who insisted on his stopping with them a couple of days, and in living over events of other days, seemed to forget the years that had passed, leaving its mark upon all alike.

In Oklahoma, crops were generally good. We camped at Muskogee, and passed oil fields containing hundreds of immense oil tanks. Cotton in northern Texas is good; south of Waco the army worm has done considerable damage.

At Alvin, Texas, near Galveston, they have gone into fig raising and there are several orchards only two or three years old that are bearing wonderfully. The figs are sold at the cannery and bring a good price. Also a developing company is doing good work east of El Paso putting in irrigation, and there are many prosperous farms and acres of cotton that will yield two bales to the acre.

Arizona also has some fine cotton fields especially through Salt River valley. Through Phoenix and Yuma the heat was intense and many have their beds and cots in the yards; it is a long, dreary route of cactus and sand.

Imperial Valley, California, looked refreshing in comparison; the first cool night was experienced on the mountains near San Diego. Going through Pasadena up the coast route, we got into a cold fog, and through the Sacramento Valley on the west side we had a very strong headwind.

At Yreka we had quite a shower which lasted until we were nearly home, where we arrived at 6 p. m. Friday. We traveled 8,200 miles; were in several electric storms, living out all the time and never got wet nor took cold. We passed through fifteen states.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeberg.
