BAN ON NATIONAL FOREST ILLEGAL, FORESTER HOLDS

In answer to the statement recently made by District Attorney Jesse W. Carter of Shasta County, California, that the recent orders of the forest service restricting public use of national forest-lands are absolutely illegal and contrary to law, the California district headquarters of the United States Forest Service at San Francisco has issued the following statement: "The act of congress of June 4, 1897, called the National Forest Administration Act, provides that the secretary of agriculture shall make provisions for the protection against destruction by fire and depredations upon the public forests and forest reservations and that he may make such rules and regulations and establish such service as will insure the object, of such reservations, namely, to regulate their occupancy and use and to preserve the forests thereon from destruction. Any violation of such rules and regulations is punishable under federal laws by both fine and imprisonment. Settlers Not Barred

The secretary of agriculture has promulgated a regulation prohibiting the use of national forest lands designated as areas of fire hazard, except under permit, however, being required of actual settlers going to and from their homes. District Attorney Carter says that this law expressly provides that nothing shall be done to prevent the people from entering or leaving the forests for lawful purposes. If this is all he said he has neglected to fully inform the public as to this particular part of the act. It provides "nor shall anything herein prohibit any person from entering upon such forest reservations for all proper and lawful purposes including that of prospecting, locating and developing the mineral resources thereof: Provided, that such persons comply with the rules and regulations covering such forest reservations."

To Enforce Rules - That the secretary of agriculture has full power to pass any regulation for the protection of the forests from fire is clear from the provisions of the law. That such regulations are valid and have the force of law has been fully established by the decisions of the supreme court of the United States. In view of these laws and decisions, forest officers state that they have ample authority and intend to fully enforce the closing orders relating to national forests in California.

SISKIYOU HOLDUP IN A COLLIER ARTICLE - An article in Collier's magazine gives a clear account of the methods used by Professor Heinrich in making certain deductions which assisted in the fastening of the famous train dynamiting and robbery on the D'Autremont brothers, who are still fugitives from justice, instead of holding the garage mechanic for the robbery, as was at first done. The Sherlockian professor based his deductions on the batteries, monkey wrench and pair of overalls which the bandits left behind them. In describing how he exerated the garage mechanic, who was held since the battery left by the bandits came from his garage, the professor stated to the Collier's writer: "It was all very simple," the university instructor told me. "I saw at a glance that the grime on the overalls was not oil at all but pitch. That eliminated the garage mechanic. Closer examination under the microscope proved that the 'oil' was fir pitch. Under the stereoscopic microscope the particles of dust in the pockets, magnified 500 times, were resolved into bits of Douglas fir needles, finger nail cuttings, and leaves of the 'kinnikinnick,' and salal, which are peculiar to the Pacific Northwest. There were pine chips in the right hand pocket. I got the color of the hair from a strand caught on a button."

"How could you tell he was left-handed?" I asked. "Chips in the right-hand pocket. 'A left-handed man stands with his right side to the tree while chopping. Flying chips enter his right-hand pocket, not his left.' "And his fastidiousness?" "Finger-nail cuttings. Unless a lumberjack is fastidious he does not cut his finger nails as neatly as those cuttings in the pocket indicated. That caused me to believe that he would be equally careful about his hair being cut. "The creases of his overalls, betraying the way he rolled the legs of the garment to fit into a lumberman's shoe, as well as the things found in his pockets, told me he was a lumberjack. Plant specimens peculiar to the Northwest indicated his abode. The size of his overalls gave his approximate weight and height. Does that satisfy you?"

"No," I replied. "How did you know his age? Or that he was not a Negro or an Indian?" Heinrich laughed. "Now that sounds difficult, but it was not. Examination of the hair gave me the age. We have charts showing the condition of the pith of hair at various ages. Comparing a magnified cross section of this man's hair with the chart, I found it belonged to a man between twenty and twenty-five. The cross section of a negro's hair is elliptical. An Indian's is coarse and straight. By its general appearance and the character of the scales, I knew the hair in question belonged to a white man."

TIGHTER LAWS ON REAL ESTATE TO BE LEGISLATED - SALEM, Sept. 23.—Tightening up the real estate laws now in operation in Oregon will be recommended to the legislature at its next session by Will H. Moore, who, by virtue of his appointment as state insurance commissioner, is in charge of the state real estate department. It was pointed out by Mr. Moore today that under the existing laws a stranger may come into the state, file an application, together with a form signed by 10 free holders, furnish the state with a surety bond for $1000 or a personal bond signed by two persons having property valued at more than that amount, and engage in the real estate business. Many complaints of questionable real estate transactions have been filed with Mr. Moore during the past year, and in one instance the man complained of had been convicted of fraud in another state. The permit of this man to operate in Oregon was revoked by the state real estate commissioner, with the result that the applicant has appealed the decision of the real estate department to the circuit court. There is another case where a man came into the state, procured a license to sell real estate, practiced sharp trading for a few months, and subsequently was called before the commissioner for hearing. It was proved that the man's dealings were questionable, and upon recommendation of W. A. Mullin, chief deputy in the state insurance department, his license to operate was revoked. The man has since appealed his case to the circuit court for final determination. The act of appealing the case to the circuit court supercedes the ruling of the commissioner and entitles the broker to continue operations unmolested until a court decision is handed down. Because of the many cases under consideration, Mr. Moore said it may be several months before the action filed against this broker can be disposed of, and in the interim there is no way in which he can be prevented from dealing with the public. The records in the real estate department show that in one case a man who had appealed to the court defrauded clients of more than $2500 after his commission to operate had been revoked. As a cure for this evil, Mr. Moore will ask the legislature to increase the amount of the appeal bond from $500 to $2000. In order that all safeguards may be thrown around real estate transactions, Mr. Moore has urged that all misunderstandings and alleged misrepresentations on the part of brokers be reported to his department without any delay. This would expedite investigations, and in many cases recover losses suffered by unsuspecting investors.

NO RESERVOIR ON SHASTA FORESTER REPORTS

(Continued from Page 1) the air. The fact that there has been more mud flow activity in Mud Creek Canyon than in other streams on the mountain is held by Hall to be due to the fact that the glacier and ice fields which feed Mud Creek are on the southeastern side of the mountain and catch more sun than do similar bodies further north on the mountain. Hall says the last heavy flow of debris down Mud Creek Canyon was a week ago Sunday. The glacier is located by Hall as extending from the 11,000-foot elevation to a point near the peak. Due to the reports that unusual disturbances had taken place on the mountain, numerous telegrams have been received here. Some ask for the safety of relatives and friends of the senders. Others inquire as to the safety of railroad travel. To all reply is made that there is no danger.

GOLD HILL FEARS LOSS OF HIGHWAY

A tip comes from up north to the effect that the road on the south side of the river is soon to be brought up to grade and surfaced with concrete, say the Gold Hill News. This tip also states that unless the Commercial Club of Gold Hill gets real busy right quick they will wake up some fine day and find the Pacific highway "over yonder" and that Gold Hill will be a side issue, hard to find, by the tourists who have had their ears filled to the brim with stories about the speed cop who is reputed north and south with pinching anyone traveling faster than twelve miles per hour in Gold Hill. The tip is worth investigating at least and anyway the Commercial Club should be revived and the fighting spirit in Gold Hill quieted down a little—the town is sliding backwards.

OREGON FAIR IS NOW OPERATING

Expect Best Program of Entire History; Many New Improvements. SALEM, Sept. 22.—The gates of the Oregon State fair opened this morning for what officials predict will be the largest and most notable state exposition in the history of the annual event. Workmen have been busy on the grounds for the past fortnight and every building hums with activity. The Oregon Agricultural college exhibit, always one of the biggest and most comprehensive on the entire grounds, this year occupies fully 50 per cent more space than heretofore. Aside from the regular space the college will take over the auditorium in the educational building, utilizing this largely for their electrical display. Engineering and electrical departments of the institution are featured, with agriculture coming second. Pharmacy and home economics are likewise well represented. According to officials of the college the display is a more spectacular than before, with much of the exhibits showing the actual workings of their respective divisions. Oregon being especially adapted to the breeding and raising of livestock, it is fitting that the exhibit in this division, showing all the various breeds at the state fair, is one that is not surpassed anywhere in the country. Every barn on the grounds is filled to capacity, the showing of draft horses to be the biggest in history. The poultry exhibit is another that will assume major proportions and interest. The agricultural display is increased this year, with every section of the state represented. The night horse shows and the racing card offer excellent amusement for both after-noon and evening. Entries have been coming in at an encouraging rate the past few days for the horse show.
