President Coolidge still lives in Washington, D. C., but Walter Johnson of the Senators is the big boy in the capital these days.

A tourist came through this city with almost his entire windshield cluttered up with a political candidate's posters and stickers. This despite the fact that the candidate thus advertised is headed toward wreck and ruin, according to some dopesters.

TRYING DAYS FOR FOOTBALL COACH

PORTLAND, Oct. 2.—The trying days of pre-season football grind, with its all-perplexing problems to coaches, with its zeal and grim determination of aspirants for permanent berths will end this week in the Pacific Northwest. It is a week of grueling scrimmages, a week of hard whipping by anxious coaches. Out of the results of the week end clashes will come a semblance of something more than mere speculation as to the relative strength of the doubtful ones, the mystery elevens.

Up Seattle way they are still optimistic. The Huskies are looming ever more powerful. They look threatening to their opponents for the coast championship. The heavy line developed this week is as formidable as any on the coast—Kuhn, Petrie, Bellman and Waters—all veterans, a hard combination to beat.

From Pullman comes the word that the Cougars will average 187 pounds to the man. With most of the beef concentrated on the line and a fast, shifty backfield of such veterans as Slater at full, Hales and Waldorf at halves and Martin at quarter, they should have a look-in despite the loss of "Truck" Davis, star end who was injured in practice this week and will be out of the game the remainder of the season.

At the University of Idaho 64 warriors, the largest in the institution's history turned out. The big year for the Vandals may not arrive until next year but they will be watching in 1924. They are scrappers from the word go.

At Corvallis Coach Schissler of the Aggies has a wealth of material, there such equal competition that two "first" teams have been formed, and it may develop that Schissler's strategy in shifting an entire squad during a game will prove disastrous to their opponents. A demonstration of the equal strength of these two "first" teams came during scrimmage last week when the two squads were pitted in a sea-saw battle.

Whitman's hopes for a victory over the Oregon Aggies at Pendleton Saturday were strengthened during the past week with the return of Wyman Rathford, heavy guard and three year letter man. Tilton is providing a sensation at quarter and it is believed he will replace Freddie Corkrum, diminutive signal caller of last year. The backfield is reported an airtight combination and if the line can be bolstered up Whitman should make a great showing this year.

Down at Eugene the Oregonians have three weeks to prepare for their next big game—Stanford on October 18. The miserable showing of the team in Saturday's game with Willamette was a stinging surprise to Coach Maddock. Neither on defense or offense did the team meet up with the expectations of its mentor. Unless a world of improvement develops within the coming few weeks before the harder games on the schedule arrive the Oregonians are in for some disastrous defeats.

Fired with enthusiasm over their virtual victory Saturday—a tie with Oregon U.—the warriors of Coach Rathbun of Willamette University are back at work in preparation for their game with Washington at Seattle Saturday. Prospects seem brighter this year than any in the history of the institution.

FOREST DRAIN TO BE SUBJECT OF A NATIONAL MEET

Secretary Wallace's call for a national conference on the utilization of forest products, has just been received at the Forest Service offices in Portland.

This meeting, which is to be held in Washington on November 19 and 20, will mark the most comprehensive attempt ever made in the United States to have the economical use of existing timber supplies take its essential place in the national forestry program along with the prevention of forest fires and the growing of timber crops, declares officials of the Forest Service.

Can Reduce Drain on Forests
By better ways of manufacture and use the drain on the country's forests can be reduced at least one-fourth, Secretary Wallace states in his letter to 150 representatives of wood-using industries, consumers, the building crafts, and the general public who have been asked to name 2,000 men and women to whom invitations to attend the conference should be sent.

"Lumbermen and timber owners of Oregon and Washington should be keenly interested in this conference and be fully represented, for with these two States having approximately one-third of the remaining standing timber, the public is looking more and more to the Pacific Northwest for their lumber supply, but what is more important, will look to Pacific Coast lumbermen and loggers to effect all possible reduction in waste, both in the woods and in the mill," said District Forester Cecil, in commenting on Secretary Wallace's call. The Pacific Northwest lumbermen has shown an interest in fire prevention, is beginning to become interested in reforestation; but in the problem of cutting down the waste of timber, there has been little or no general real interest shown to date, foresters hold.

It is planned to have the two-day meeting attended by representatives of both the wood-consuming industries of the country. Newspapers, periodicals, railroads, builders, architects, foresters, forest schools, and the general public will be represented. Secretary Wallace will issue his invitations to the conference as soon as possible after receiving the responses to the letters he mailed today.

In his letter the Secretary said: "As you know, the question of timber supply is becoming more acute year by year. We are studying it from three angles; first, how to protect the timber we have from fire, insect pests and plant diseases; second, how to encourage the growing of more timber, both on national forests and private forests; third, how to cut down the waste in the manufacture and use of wood."

Joint Action is Necessary
"We believe that by better ways of manufacture and use the drain on our forests can be reduced by at least one-fourth. This problem has not received the attention it should have. We need more facts than we have as the basis for a workable program. After considering the whole matter carefully, I have decided to call a national conference on wood wastes, to be held in Washington, November 19 and 20, in the hope that such a conference may be able to work out a plan of joint action by Federal, State, and industrial agencies. The responsibility is a joint one in which the public and the industries alike have a vital interest."

"The thought is to invite representatives of all the association and industries financially interested in the manufacture and use of forest products, as well as the representatives of State forest organizations, the trade and general press and public interest and education groups. I am hoping that you and several others will come from your own association, and I am asking if you will suggest the names of individuals who will take a live interest in the subject and to whom I can send personal invitations. I believe the purpose of the conference is sufficiently important to justify the time and expense consumed in attending it."

TWO SKELETONS FOUND
KLAMATH FALLS, Oct. 3.—A scraper operated by a road building crew on Wocus marsh, five miles north of Klamath Falls unearthed two human skeletons today, revealing an evident tragedy of decades past.

The supposition is that the two persons were drowned there, since the Wocus marsh was formerly an inlet from upper Klamath lake.

TEACHING BY VISUALIZATION

The visualization of an object, the association of an object with an historical fact, is proving a successful method of teaching, according to school officials. Association has always been recognized as one of the best methods to improve one's memory and it should add interest and value to teaching methods.

Dr. S. A. Barrett, head of the Milwaukee public museum, which is used by the Milwaukee schools, highly recommends the visualization method and says:

"Somehow people believe most what they can see. They appear to trust their sight more than any other senses. Throughout the centuries of human progress those religions which have had the most symbols, images, rituals and ceremonies have had the most followers.

"A schoolboy may be taught history out of a book, but it is far more interesting for him if it is visualized, and that is what we are doing at the Milwaukee Public Museum.

"The groups representing dramatic moments and modes of living at different periods in the history of the United States are life-like models and correct to the last detail.

"In a group representing the Battle of Lexington the uniforms of the soldiers—officers and men—are complete, even the belt-buckles being truly produced. The painted background carries the idea still further, for the houses are copied from styles used in the period represented.

"It certainly is vastly more interesting for a child to see the Battle of Lexington than to read about it. The memory of the things he has seen will linger after the printed words are long forgotten.

"That these visualized lessons are popular is attested by the fact that 300 to 500 school children have two-hour lessons in visualized history each day at the museum. The first lesson is spent in hearing a talk and seeing motion pictures. Then the children are taken to a group that has to do with the part of history they may be studying."

The museum also contains a motion picture film library, from which educational films are loaned to schools.

Even Johnny McGraw, veteran Giant fighter, was shocked. It must have been a rotten affair.
