WIFE SEEKS DIVORCE CHARGES MATE WITH EXTREME CRUELTY

For the first few years of his married life Joseph McGee was a model husband. During that time he worked hard and built up a prosperous business, but the strain of it left its mark upon the health. He began to have trouble with his stomach, which made him cross and irritable. Finally, his wife claims, he grew so abusive that she could not live in the same house with him. She asks for a divorce and custody of their two children.

The above story explains the cause of a great many divorces. Every man or woman with stomach distress of any kind should use Smith Bros.' M. A. C., the guaranteed stomach treatment. This delightful medicine helps to build up and invigorate the whole digestive system. It cleanses the alimentary canal of foul waste matter and restores that cheerful, happy feeling. Money back if the very first bottle doesn't relieve indigestion, dyspepsia, excessive gas, bloating, nausea or other symptoms of a disordered stomach. Price $1.25.

Mrs. Louis Dodge gave an excellent review of the book "Swinging Lanterns" which tells of the customs of the Chinese and is a very charming story of Chinese life.

The regular business meeting was held, the vice-president, Mrs. Polley presiding in the absence of the president Mrs. Peil.

The next meeting will be a luncheon at the hotel Ashland at one o'clock next Monday.

Civic Club—In the absence of both the president, Mrs. P. K. Hammond, and the vice-president, Mrs. C. E. Peil, Mrs. H. K. Tomlinson, former president, assumed the duties of chairman at Tuesday's meeting of the Civic Club.

Interest in the afternoon's program brought a large percentage of the membership and many visitors to hear the treat in store.

In view of this fact the business matters, other than those referring directly to the Thrift Sale were held in abeyance, and the time given to the program hour.

The speaker, Miss Grace H. Chamberlain, needed no introduction, and her appearance was greeted with a salvo of applause.

From the beginning until the close of the address rapt attention was given.

Visualizing for us the great gathering, with its colorful pageantary its perfection in functioning—with the thousand trained women to assist in the mechanics of the convention—every phase was touched upon in the speakers happy fashion. The human touch was not lacking and many incidents, delightfully told, added to the interest.

The dominant thought of the convention "World Peace" and women as a world force was strongly emphasized, and the vital message from the many speakers was presented in clear-cut phrase.

The manifold courtesies extended the delegates; the wonderful music; the personalities of the leading figures in this notable gathering; the extent of the varied activities, and the great influence of women in organized Club life came in for a share of attention.

In closing, Miss Chamberlain brought before her audience again the keynote of the convention; the preservation of Amerinew honors with the approaching Winter season. Models now coming from the hands of the grande couturiers demonstrate that there is no other lovelier garniture for feminine frocks than lace.

There promises to be many lace tunics this Winter, with slight gathers in godets at the sides to give the proper flare. Silver-lace ones, edged with fur, make charming frocks over slips of black satin. The lacemakers have now succeeded in bringing forth laces with extreme suppleness and airiness and none of the old stiff aspect of harsh, metallic laces of earlier years. Dyed the same tone as the dress itself, lace makes a charming trimming for afternoon dresses. For evening wear gold and silver mesh, as fine as cobwebs and with a beautiful reflection, are used.

Francis is showing a handsome silver-lace, with large chrysanthemums in the design, and still another, with smaller flowers, beaded with porcelain in bright red. Madame Sandra is showing a lovely evening dress of gold lace, over pale pink, that has a new line, being high in front with a deep V-back and a lace bolero effect. And, by the way, this new dressmaker, who is having much success in Paris, is the wife of a former Russian diplomat, a councillor in Petrograd under the Kerensky Government. She was an authority on costume and design before the fall of the imperial government, as one can easily believe after seeing her delightful models here.

One of her gowns has Venetian lace, which is going to be very popular, in a small plastron in the center and a narrow tunic of it at the bottom. Still another is trimmed with embroidered tulle in the form of a little apron front and collar and cuffs.

That fashion goes from one extreme to another is proved by the news that rugs will cover madame's beauty when lace is not doing it. Yes, this means a real old rug, but very supple and soft which is used to make amusing sport coats lined with leather.
