SCIENTIST PREDICTS ELECTRIC BATTERIES OF UNLIMITED LIFE

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Electric batteries that will last thousands of years before running down are a possibility of the near future, according to the claims of a Birmingham scientist, J. B. Kramer, who claims to have discovered a new generative source of electricity by which energy will be drawn in limitless quantities from vast natural resources of radio-active substances and harnessed to the services of the world. Fuel and chemicals are not needed, he states.

"The principal on which my discovery is based is a perfectly natural process and is so noticeable and elementary that scientists appear to have overlooked it," Kramer said in an interview. "Briefly, it consists of placing radio-active material between plates of different metals, such as copper and aluminum, which by virtue of their differences have a discriminating quality between the positive and negative elements of the radio-activity, and storing them up in a charge of electricity, which can be drawn off in the usual way.

"The world is full of radio-active substance, and there are countless millions of tons available. "There is a species of sand on the shores of India and elsewhere which is radio-active, and upward of twenty different minerals have similar properties. Most of these substances endure for thousands of years, and the energy would be good for the whole of that time.

"This radio-activity is a natural process. It goes on incessantly, and it remains only for man to devise some means of storing it and turning it into electrical energy." Kramer confidently believes that he has solved this problem. With his apparatus he claims to have succeeded in driving a small engine, which, he says, he will demonstrate shortly.

MUCH LUCK SAVES GIRL FROM DEATH HALF HUNDRED TIMES

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., Oct. 22.—"She bears a charmed life." That is the explanation made today by friends of Miss Celia Connors, 103 years old, for seventy years in inmates of the Broome County Home, who a score of times has been deep in "the valley of the shadow of death," and who today came back from the borderland of the other world.

In a huge old leather bound book of records, a reporter today found the proof of Miss Connors' entry at the County Home. It is dated 1854 and says, "Celia Connors, thirty-three years old." From that date until this "Little Celia," as she has been known down through the decades, has been a sunbeam in the bleak house over the hill.

At thirty-three she had no friends or relatives able to aid her after a nervous breakdown, and she was sent to the County Home. She went there apparently doomed to early death.

From the slough of despondency she arose by sheer strength of spirit, and that queer, almost uncanny, inner power has kept her active of mind and body until today.

Hundreds have come to the County Farm since "Little Celia" came. Hundreds have come over the hill; stayed a while and then been carried slowly out to the still white cemetery beyond. But Celia's spirit has never wavered. Pneumonia, fever, serious bone fractures—many, many ills of the flesh Celia has suffered. But each time she has come back with the same queer little smile, the same odd flicker in her deep blue eyes.

The old-timers around the County Home whisper about Celia. Some say they can't explain her power over the Grim Reaper. Others say they can explain it. They whisper that she is immortal; that her sunny ways, her light heart, her love, that has been transferred from children to everybody around her, make her indispensable at the home. They say she will be there as long as the brick walls stand.

They have many ways of proving it. They point to the time when "Little Celia" lost her speech, and to the time when she lost her hearing, and when she lost her sight. Then they ask whether she can speak and hear and see now. And they can tell you that she surely can. Each time she has been so near death that a quiver would have taken her over, and each time she has returned the same appealing "Little Celia."

merce calendar, so that it might demand advance attention that will allow for thorough preparation and widely distributed business representation in its personnel.

Of the significance of the spirit of the state as encountered on the trip last week, Mr. Mielke said: "It has been most gratifying to find in southern Oregon and in the Coos bay country that the feeling there toward Portland is no longer antagonistic or even apathetic, but that, on the other hand, it is neighborly and friendly.

"That this is true must have been very evident to anyone who made this trip.

COMMENDS HARTZELL

My acquaintance with Mr. Hartzell, the Republican candidate for county judge, dates back almost to the time when he came to Jackson county, fifteen years ago, to take charge of the Three Oaks Orchard, which is located about a mile west of Phoenix. He had some alfalfa land, and some grain land, but most of the property was planted to young orchard, unproductive and a source of expense for twelve months in the year. He has stuck to his job, year in, year out, and brought the property to a point where it is financially profitable. As I look back, and remember the people who have failed to succeed with similar undertakings, I know that he has persistence, good judgment and business ability. He couldn't have made the grade otherwise.

When the Talent Irrigation District was organized, Mr. Hartzell was elected director and has served as president of the board ever since. I live in that district, and I know something of the difficulties that have been overcome and of the work which has been accomplished, and I believe that to to remember that cars start harder and are more costly to operate in winter than in summer.

If your ignition system is put in first class condition, your battery will give less trouble and your expense this winter will be less.

Let us tell you how little it will cost to put your car in shape for pleasant motoring this winter.

When in need of a battery, do not forget the wonderful new

Mr. Hartzell, more than to any other one man, is due the success of the project. He has been on the job all the time. There have been a good many difficulties to overcome, but the work has progressed steadily. There has been no graft, the district has the best financial standing of any irrigation project in Oregon; and I believe we have the water for as low a cost as was possible. Perhaps I am prejudiced in favor of Mr. Hartzell by reason of what I know of his work in this connection, but I think I have a right to be.

Last spring I was associated with a number of others in organization a Tax Payers Anti-Paving committee. We were interested in lowering taxes and, with that in view, suggested to the county court that a committee be appointed by the court or elected (one member from each road district) to sit with the court in all vital matters concerning road work. We believed that such a committee would largely do away with unnecessary expenditures of county money on roads and result in a more equitable distribution of the funds.

Here is what Mr. Hartzell said when the plan was submitted to him: "Such a plan, in case I should be elected, would meet with my entire approval. By such a method a just distribution could more nearly be reached as to expenditures and more efficient, satisfactory and equitable results rendered the citizens of the whole county.

"Any county judge should welcome the assistance of such a committee, in determining some of the important questions concerning roads. Through this course the county judge is kept in constant touch with the needs and wishes of his constituency. "However it should be distinctly understood that at no time should the county judge surrender any of either the duties or responsibilities of his office."

The more I read that the better I like Mr. Hartzell's attitude. Willing to take advice, but surrendering none of the responsibilities of the office, I like Mr. Hartzell's stand on another matter. He says:

"I am a firm believer in law enforcement and am in sympathy with the present prohibition laws. They will at all times receive my hearty support. However, I am opposed to special prohibition employees working in conflict with the sheriff's office. The responsibility for performing the duties of his office is and should be squarely placed on the sheriff. If deputies are necessary they should be given him. If he fails to function, the people have their remedy."

Mr. Hartzell's taxes for 1923 were $2715.39. He is a heavy taxpayer. He is not a tax dodger. He is interested in reducing taxes and in case he is elected county judge and it is possible to reduce taxes, I believe he will do so.

Knowing him as a neighbor, as a private citizen, as a business man, and as a public official, I believe if we elect Mr. Hartzell county judge we will be putting the right man in the right place. S. A. NYE, Talent, Ore., Oct. 25. (Paid Adv.)
