SHAW TO RESCUE OF HIS PLAY ON ABUSE OF WOMAN

LONDON, Nov. 10. —Modern English working woman is little better off than she was a quarter of a century ago, George Bernard Shaw believes.

Shaw's play, "Mrs. Warren's Profession," written thirty years ago, has just passed the English censor and has recently been produced in Paris. Sisley Huddleston wrote a review of the play stating that the play is unreal because "it has nothing to do with our day. Some of the conditions of labor for girls which it describes have long since been swept away."

This criticism aroused the wrath of Shaw, who was quick to reply.

"At the beginning of the war," Shaw said, "when everybody was more or less mad except the rogues who reaped a huge harvest from the suspension of all the laws that protected labor from mercenary exploitation, the late Mary McArthur and Miss Margaret Bondfield found women working twelve hours a day for five cents an hour, under the impression they were saving their country instead of making huge profits for their employers. These great public-spirited ladies, with the countenance of the Queen, put a stop to that; but the monstrosity of the abuse shows what women still endure when they are outside the scope of the factory code, as many of them necessarily are."

"A terrible improvement of the middle classes, with moderate fixed incomes, has been produced by the debasement of the currency and the consequent rise of prices. Women who, in 'Mrs. Warren's' time, were provided for by insurance and annuities left them—often at a great sacrifice—by their parents, cannot now live on their incomes except in most abject penury. The interest on the National Debt alone is a million pounds a day; and famine revolution is being bought off by doles. And yet Mr. Sisley Huddleston thinks that the poverty which drives women to prostitution is now a mere tale of old, unhappy, far-off things and battles long ago."

"During the war we had an agitation about the morals of our soldiers in the field; and we had descriptions of the endless lines that stood waiting for admission to 'Mrs. Warren's' houses. We were anxious about the soldiers. Nobody seemed anxious about the women, or about the extremity to which they must have been driven before resorting to such an intolerable means of livelihood. Some people even seemed to regard it as a form of self-indulgence!"

"All that Mr. Huddleston can claim is that some attempts have been made to prevent lead poisoning and phosphorous poisoning in the factories in which 'Mrs. Warren's' 'respectable' sisters worked. If that consoles him, it does not console me, nor make the lesson of my play obsolete. It still remains as true as it was in 1894 that we praise female virtue highly and pay it poorly, and pay female vice highly, while we deplore it verbally. We flog foreign white slave traffickers of the male sex (thus protecting 'Mrs. Warren' against male competition); but we do not raise the wages of women to the point at which they could be independent of prostitution. That is the root of the matter."

AUSTRALIA IS HURT BY HEAVY RAINFALL

MELBOURNE, Nov. 10. —Serious floods have been caused in parts of Victoria, Queensland and Tasmania by unusually heavy rains which lasted several days. One drowning is reported from Tasmania.

In the flooded district in Queensland three girls, assisted by their brother, succeeded in swimming the swollen Warrego river, towing their aged father to a place of safety.

The rains have considerably improved the crop prospects.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't Stay Gray! Here's an Old-time Recipe that Anybody can Apply

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.
