REFUGEE PROBLEM MAY FAN NEW WARS IN BALKAN STATES

SOFIA, Nov. 11.—The problem of refugees is adding daily to the dangers of another Balkan outbreak.

Expulsion of nationals of one Balkan country over the borders into another Balkan country has created a situation which is rapidly growing more serious and is arousing anew the slumbering embers of national hatred.

Bulgaria now harbors no less than half a million refugees, one-tenth of its entire population being these unfortunate and they are living in most unsanitary quarters, suffering from unspeakable hardships.

The Angora Government is now apparently intent upon expelling another half million Greeks from Asia Minor and Constantinople, which will mean another influx of homeless wanderers into the Balkans.

Greece, suffering from economic straits, faces the problem of caring for nearly 2,000,000 refugees of Grecian nationality. To make room for these she has been forced to clear Thrace and Macedonia of alien population and is setting her Asiatic nationals in those regions. The expulsions to make room for refugees have merely resulted in the creation of more refugees and created ill feeling.

Bulgar nationals in Thrace and Macedonia protest that they are being driven from their homes by the Greeks in a high-minded manner and charge that they are being deprived of their crops and their cattle.

Bulgaria has a Grecian population of about 50,000, but the Bulgarian Government doesn't see fit to retaliate.

Meanwhile, the peoples of the League of Nations, because it has failed to act in the face of repeated appeals. Hatred for the Turks grows apace and across the borders of the tiny Balkan countries the flames of inter-racial passion are being fanned high.

This problem of refugees may easily become a question that the great powers will have to handle if they desire to keep peace in the Balkans.

URGES NATION-WIDE SERVICE TO LOCATE JOBS FOR THE IDLE

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The establishment of a free nationwide public employment service, to be maintained by the States in co-operation with the Federal and local governments, for the benefit of men, women and juniors in all walks of life, is recommended by the Russell Sage Foundation in a 600-page report on employment methods, needs and agencies, made public here today as the result of a five-year study which took the Foundation's investigations into more than seventy cities of the United States and Canada.

The full report is being submitted to President Coolidge and to the Governors of the States. The importance of the Foundation's studies in this field becomes apparent when it is recalled that a preliminary statement made public several weeks ago showed that unemployment is no longer an occasional problem, but a constant phenomenon affecting large numbers of workers in every community.

The principal recommendations are summarized as follows by Shelby M. Harrison, Director of the Department of Surveys and Exhibits of the Russell Sage Foundation, who was in charge of the studies on which the report is based:

"That the Federal Government encourage and assist the States to maintain adequate systems of public employment offices and to coordinate these into an effective nation-wide service.

"That the States administer and support their own employment offices, subject to the terms of agreement with the Federal Government; and that the local government participate in the management of the offices in their communities through representation on their local Employment Committee.

"That, in order to establish the non-partisan character of the service, the function to be performed by the Federal Government be administered by a board appointed by and directly responsible to the President.

"That the board consist of the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of Commerce and the Secretary of Agriculture.

"That a National Council and local employment committees, representing employers, workers and possibly other allied interests, be established as an additional aid in securing neutrality of administration as well as a reputation for such.

"That the procedure of the service in respect to demands for workers by employers in whose establishment a strike or lock-out is in progress or is pending, shall be such as to guarantee the neutrality of the service."

In the conclusion following the discussion of a purely Federal versus a combined Federal-State-local system, the report says:

"Whoever proves finally the more desirable, an exclusively Federal or a Federal-State-local employment service, it is commonly conceded that the former is not at present feasible; and with this we are in agreement. To think that Congress, either now or in the immediate future, would appropriate $10,000,000 for an employment service, an amount estimated as necessary to provide an adequate basis, is an idle dream. Expediency demands combined Federal-State-local administration. We must begin with what we have."

OFFICIALS NOT WORRIED OVER STATE FINANCE

be heavy diversions to the general state fund of moneys appropriated by the last legislature but now unused.

Among these diversions will be approximately $50,000 by the Oregon state hospital; between $40,000 and $50,000 by the eastern Oregon state hospital; nearly $50,000 from the state home for the feeble minded and $50,000 that was appropriated for the maintenance of the battleship Oregon.

Other financial sources that will assist the state in meeting its obligations without exceeding the 6 per cent limitation amendment will be increased fees from a number of state departments, and an excess of more than $300,000 in income tax collections over the $1,250,000 that was originally estimated.

There also will be added to the state's revenue approximately $700,000 of uncollected income taxes for 1924. Although the attorney-general has not yet ruled as to whether this unpaid tax is collectible, other lawyers have said that it is an obligation to the state and will have to be paid.

The problem of super-broad-casting, like any other department of progress, will be settled upon the principle of public service. Ultimately, performance, not opinion, will determine the direction of progress in the radio art.

RADIO ANTENNAS NOT DANGEROUS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Radio antennas are not a menace to property during thunder storms.

This statement is made on the authority of the United States Bureau of Standards, the Government's scientific research laboratory.

"Radio aerials cannot be regarded as an effective protection against lightning," the Bureau said. "On the other hand they need not be considered as potential inviters of lightning strokes, being in a class with other metal objects normally found about buildings, such as metal gutters, down spouts and wire clothes-lines."

Antennas, if grounded, or provided with a lightning arrester, may effect gradual drainage of electricity as well as a lightning rod, but a direct stroke is likely to fuse them or tear them from their fastenings on account of their small diameter.

visible in these machines, but the planes are thus named because their method of moving is very much the same as that of a sailboat. They must proceed in a zigzag manner like a boat tacking, taking advantage of currents of air, preferably contrary, in order to advance.

The trials of the Italian planes are specially interesting, as their two machines are the result of the studies and the actual constructive work of nineteen students of the University of Padua, who are not enrolled in the course of engineering, as might naturally be supposed. They have spent much time in investigating machines of all sorts in Germany, France and England, and their two planes are a combination of ideas and plans of various types.

The method of starting was unusual. Elastic cords having been attached to a hook at the prow, a number of young men caught the cord-ends and ran ahead, while the machine was held at the back by another company of youths. When the pilot gave the word to let go, the men at the back loosed their hold, and those in front gave a final pull and threw themselves on the ground at the sides of the machine. The planes rose, and although they remained in the air but a certain number of seconds, the persons interested consider that the experiments were successful and promise well for the future.
