A CURE FOR WORRY:—Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.—Philippians 4:6, 7. PRAYER:—O Lord our God, we thank Thee for the assurance that Thou wilt supply our every need out of Thy riches in glory in Christ Jesus our Lord.

BUILDING AN AMERICAN NAVY

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur has given him the problem of representing the conscience of the Coolidge administration on the development of the navy.

Shall he be conservative, or radical? His chief is very conservative in most matters. Coolidge is for active repression of national expense. He is for conscious preservation of financial interests whether of farmers or of merchants, of manufacturers, or of working men. He does not believe in stirring up antagonisms as a benefit to the mass of people, but believes in quiet educational advance.

But that sort of conservation does not, apparently, help in the maintenance of the national defense: There it is necessary, if one is to build, to build with the active consent of the people. To call for expense, for defense, we must show that defense is needed. To show that need, we must show danger of attack. There must be explanations about one country or another, with greeds or ambitions that would run counter to our needs or our fixed rights or our expectations.

Here is where a man, situated as is Secretary Wilbur, runs afoul of popular criticism. In order to be cautious, he must be "yellow." In order to protect rights, he must seem to attack rights. In order to do his duty, he must seem to give offense.

We ought to be able to support a healthy foreign policy for the United States, without being offensive to others. We ought to be able to have a bulwark on the Pacific or the Atlantic, without pointing guns "at" any particular people.

And if we have the right sort of healthy minds, about this, we can do it.

SELF GOVERNMENT BY EMPHASIS

We have been "democrats" with a small "d", nominally for more than a century. Actually, we grow very slowly in the art of self government as an American people. The problem of keeping a hundred millions of people in line for one purpose or another, or getting 50 millions of them in line, or getting a majority of those who will take sides on a question, and making sure that suddenly there will not be a new majority, made up for the other side, out of those who a day or a month or a year before would not take the trouble to vote—this problem is acute in the United States. It involves the by no means new and yet ever new art of publicity. We govern ourselves by means of leadership, having citizens try to persuade their fellows to one or another course of action. These leaders arouse interest, get out the vote, manage as representatives of their fellow men through offices to which they are elected, or which they can influence.

Emphasis on public affairs is a part of this leadership, and emphasis always works in one of two directions. Either it exaggerates, or it minimizes. That is why we have had and always will have to sorts of statesmen, the radicals and the conservatives. The radicals are those who emphasize by exaggeration. The conservatives are those who emphasize by minimizing. Either may be honest. But the one usually believes in action that will lead to change, the other in action that will preserve and maintain what is, and perhaps what has been.

In dealing with our question of national defense we run afoul of these two sorts of people. And peculiarly enough, men who are conservative in other things may be radical in this. Or men who are radical in other things are apt to be conservative in this.

For in order to arouse a public interest in the spending of money on national defense, the need of national defense has to be shown. And if one talks of the need of defense, one runs afoul of the charge of sensationalism in discussing foreign relations.

The conservative in national defense matters will declare there is no need of war, as well as war being horrible and inhumane. He will declare that the threat of war is a suggestion to take away interest from internal questions that require reform. This conservative is a conservative by reference only. He is a radical on money matters, or on social relations. But radical as he may be on domestic questions, he is for letting alone in a possible stirring up of foreign complications.

THE GOLD HOARDING MYTH

The idea that vast amount of money is hoarded in out-of-the-way places by the people of the United States is held to be a delusion by a large majority of banks replying to a questionnaire recently sent out.

It would keep a hosiery mill busy for some time to supply socks to hold the hidden currency if some of the estimates,—from $1,000,000,000 to $2,500,000,000—are anywhere near correct. The latter sum is approximately half the entire amount of money of all kinds in circulation, including the money held by all banks at home and abroad.

But the bankers of the country seem to think that this vast hoard of hidden money is a myth. Of the 94 in the principal cities of the country who replied to the question, only nine believe that there is any considerable amount of money hoarded in their localities. In nine other cities bankers make definite estimates of the amounts that might be hoarded—from $100 to $2,000,000. Seventy thought that the amounts hoarded were insignificant and four were of the opinion that there was no hoarding at all.

All of this tends to disprove the theory that by raising the interest rates on postal savings deposits hundreds of millions can be enticed out of obscure hiding places by the government through the scheme of raising the interest rates on postal savings deposits. There is no way of telling just how much of the money poured out into the circulating stream finds its way into these secreted nooks and crannies but the amount is probably little.

BUSINESS LEGISLATION IN CONGRESS

Partly by way of forecasting and partly by way of defining its position the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, through the Department of Resolutions and Referenda, has called the attention of its members to legislative questions that will probably come up for consideration during the short session of Congress which began on December 1.

Of these measures the National Chamber supports: 1. The participation of the United States in the International Court of Justice along the lines laid down by the President.

2. The Navy deficiency bill to bring our Navy up to proper strength.

3. The Creation of a Bureau of Civil Aviation in the Department of Commerce.

4. The reorganization of the foreign service of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

5. The reduction of passport fees and the elimination of visa fees reciprocally with other countries.

6. The ratification of the Turkish Treaty.

7. The extension of the Air Mail Service.

The Chamber opposes: 1. The Howell-Barkley Bill to do away with the Railroad Labor Board and eliminate the public as a party of interest in Railroad Labor disputes.

2. Various Bills to revoke section 15a of the Transportation Act of 1920.

3. The Fitzgerald Bill providing compulsory government monopolistic workmen's compensation insurance for the District of Columbia.

4. Various Bills to develop Muscle Shoals otherwise than under the Federal Water Power Act of 1920.

There are of course a number of other measures which may assume importance or be reintroduced.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up; is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94 per cent air and 6 per cent common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, V. M. Johnson, 161 North Union Ave., Portland, Ore., is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

LIFE SAVING MEDAL WON BY LOCAL GIRL

Miss Lucile Peruzzi of Ashland who is attending the University of Oregon has passed the life saving examinations given by the members of the American Red Cross Life Saving Corps held at the University last week. Twelve girls passed the examinations according to the Oregon Emerald.

The tests consist of a distance of 100 yards and disrobing under the water, supporting a relaxed body in the water with one hand entirely free, for a period of one minute, swimming a distance of 440 yards, and various types of diving for objects under the water are included in the requirements, says the Emerald.

The successful candidates receive the Red Cross life saving certificate and emblem.
