DECEMBER 18. THE KINGDOM WITHIN.—The kingdom of God cometh not with observation: Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there!

ON WELL DIRECTED GIVING. If you know of a family that is destitute and for whom Christmas provision is not otherwise being made, tell The Tidings about it.

It is better, in order to avoid duplication of effort, to report cases of need to the recognized sources of relief than to report them to individuals.

There was a case in Portland one Christmas wherein report of a family's destitution was published in a newspaper and an earnest plea was made for a turkey to be given the family.

So if you want to be really helpful, give through the Salvation Army or the Elks, or some other organization which is in touch with the needs of the destitute.

WHAT NEWS TO PRINT. The editorial, "Milk and the Day's News," from the Christian Science Monitor, was sent to The Tidings by an anonymous correspondent.

The Monitor is a most able newspaper. It gathers at very great expense the news of world affairs. Its editorial page is one of the best informed and best written extant.

The primary purpose of the general run of other newspapers in their news columns is to inform.

The Monitor's indictment of other newspapers is both too sweeping and too severe. It is by no means true that "the least savory divorce case of a degenerate state" is "elaborated with equal zest" alongside news of world importance.

People generally do not accept the view that the way to lessen misdoing is to say nothing about it. The Monitor itself publishes much news about the activities of prohibition law violators.

There is no purpose here to defend sensational journalism or to deny that it has exemplars in limited number. But the charge and implication that newspapers generally are filthy in their news and that they have no higher motive of guidance than the venal one of pander is falsely slanderous.

LAW SHOULD NOT BE USED AS CORPORATION CLUB. Don Chafin, notorious sheriff of Logan County, West Virginia—a peace officer who openly permitted the great mining corporations to pay his deputies and then used his office to evict the workers from their homes.

months to come, at least.

Recently, after a sensational trial, Chafin himself was convicted of violating the Volstead Act, in the federal court.

In passing sentence, the court took cognizance of Chafin's record as a peace officer, saying:

"It might as well be realized that no coal association, by laying a tonnage tax on its coal and paying it to a corrupt sheriff, can prevent human liberty in the counties where that thing is done.

May the court's prediction prove correct. The existing system—so vicious and un-American as to make a national scandal—has written for Logan County a record in violence and bloodshed and injustice and wrong probably surpassed only in Herrin, Ill.

The law enforcement agencies should be kept free from all such ulterior control. Their function never is to fight the battles of capital or labor, but to see that the law is enforced impartially—that the humblest living American is not deprived of any right any more than that any corporation should be robbed of that which rightly belongs to it.

If the meek inherit the earth any time soon, they'll inherit debt enough to keep them that way.

Eyesight of English Fast Deteriorating

LONDON, Dec. 18. — The eyesight of the English as a nation is deteriorating, if recent figures of the number of elementary school children treated for spectacles can be taken as a criterion.

Of less than a million children attending these schools, 23,000 were found to have weak eyesight.

For the past few years one in every five children has been found to possess defective eyesight. Specialists predict that of future generations possibly one in every four persons will wear spectacles.
