DIVER BREAKS ALL DEPTH RECORDS

Deep sea divers, equipped with this strange diving suit, the invention of Captain Benjamin Leavitt, of Philadelphia, and diving from the salvage ship Blahely, have salvaged a $200,000 cargo of copper from the wreck of the British frigate "Cape Horn," which went down in 318 feet of water off the coast of Chile in 1869. Special pressure resisting deep sea lights permitted them to see. This is the deepest man has ever dived, the record having been 182 feet. Leavitt, however, claims to have descended 361 feet in trials. He hopes to salvage the $6,000,000 cargo of the Lusitania, sunk by a German submarine off the coast of Ireland in 252 feet of water. The deep sea lamp is shown just ahead of the diver.

READING, Jan. 22.—While the burglar alarm was loudly ringing, robbers marched boldly out of the garage of the Hamburg Motor Car Company, owned by R. P. The thugs cut out window panes, without touching the frames, to get into the building. They packed their loot into bags, then opened the front doors, setting off the alarms, and fled in automobiles.

SEEKING TO MAKE GERMANY DRYER THAN AMERICA IS

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—During the election campaign Germany's "Anti-Saloon League" stepped forth from obscurity with an extensive program, which, should it be carried out, would render Germany dryer than the United States.

The league admittedly does not command a large force, its registration numbers totalling about 20,000 Germans. So, since an appeal to the nation or a prohibition ticket would not have hit home, the league started propaganda among the Reichstag members-elect by submitting to them, in a confidential letter, the following demands:

- "1—It should be prohibited to use corn, maize, sugar, potatoes, fruit or other foodstuffs for manufacture of alcoholic drinks, except to an extent required for medical or liturgical purposes.
- "2—Import of alcoholic drinks from abroad should be prohibited, in consideration of the instability of the German currency.
- "3—All breweries and distilleries to be nationalized and transformed into foodstuff factories.
- "4—All bars and restaurants to be taken over or managed by the Government and transformed into anti-alcoholic dining halls.
- "5—Strictest prohibition of serving out alcoholic drinks to persons under age.
- "6—During a transition-period existing licenses should be curtailed to five years and pending licenses should not be granted unless approved by a referendum of the respective community.
- "7—During a transition-period between now and definite prohibition, alcoholic drinks should not be served out on Saturdays and the preceding night, pay days, election days and the two preceding nights."

The Neue Berliner Zeitung publishing the letter comments upon it as follows: "Undoubtedly some of these demands, especially those referring to persons under age, are reasonable and should be approved, but others certainly shoot beyond their aim. The prohibition movement aims at making Germany a dry country along the lines it has done in the States. We know however that prohibition over there resulted in increased secret 'booze' and multiplication of prices for alcoholic drinks of questionable quality. It is obvious that such a chance for the worse is nowhere desirable."

Letter to The Editor:

It is a strange coincidence that on one column of The Ashland Tidings we should be informed that it is necessary to hold a special election, calling for a special bond issue to be used for the purchase of the Chautauqua building and grounds.

On the next column we are apprised of the fact that the city of Ashland has a total balance of $85,195.96 in the treasury. Why then the necessity of bonds and the added expense of an election? Will some one, who is qualified to answer, please explain.

Bachelor's Farewell Fete Lands Him in Court

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 22.—The marriage plans of Paul V. Bateman, twenty-four, of Philadelphia, were halted temporarily by Judge Daniel O. Hastings, when he was charged with driving an auto while intoxicated and fined $300 and costs. Bateman was unable to pay the fine and left his automobile as security.
