that worry and sorrow have caused the flesh to drop off men's bones the other hand, the 'man who "laughs and grows fat" also demonstrates the beneficial efforts of a hearty, cheery mind. The emotions and the thoughts certainly play a most important part in the health of the body—as everyone perience with sick people knows. Worry never helped anyone, On the contrary, it injures everyone who indulges in it, and prevents the return of normal, natural health. It has been proved that worry retards digestion, lowers respiration and circulation, and in fact all the functions of the body. On account of this, poisons begin to accumulate; these mix with the blood and are carried to the brain, where they poison the cells, and cause irritation, depression, and a host of kindred mental afflictions.
