TOY INDUSTRY IS INCREASING RAPIDLY HERE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28. (U. P.)—American children no longer have to depend on Germany for their toys for Uncle Sam's toy shops are turning out sufficient playthings for home use and export too, according to the Commerce Department.

There has been a gradual decrease in toy imports this year and when Santa Clause brings his gifts around next Christmas the majority of his toys will have been made in America, Germany however, still exports walking dolls and many other intricate mechanical toys.

The United States during the last fiscal year ended June 30 exported $1,231,913 worth of toys while imports from all foreign countries totaled only $1,180,173.

"The home manufacturer is supplying a much greater percentage of the domestic demand than the figures indicate," the Department said. "The American toy trade is growing in importance and imports according to present indications will continue to decline."
