Members, City Council,
Ashland, Oregon,
Dear Boys:

How about a building permit ordinance which will effect buildings not within the fire limits? A lot of people in Ashland believe it would be a splendid idea to have such an ordinance, and in fact some weeks ago, a group of them asked you boys for such an ordinance. I believe a committee was appointed to investigate the matter, but somehow, it has died abornin' and no action has been taken on the matter.

I don't believe there is a city the size of Ashland on the Pacific Coast which does not have a building permit ordinance. Such an ordinance does not seriously affect any legitimate builder, but does make it rather bad for those who would put up buildings which will do the city little good. It gives officials a check on buildings which would, in many cases, become fire traps or fire hazards.

In addition, such an ordinance would give everyone a check upon the building activity in the city. When every builder was forced to ask for a building permit, and specify the amount the building was to cost, we would all know much new building was going on in the city.

Thing it over boys, it's only a suggestion, but a lot of people have already asked for it.

Yours truly,
Auntie Ashland.

Ashland Motorists,
Ashland, Oregon,
Dear Folks:

Stop, look and listen. The new parking ordinance will be in effect within a few days now, as soon as Mayor Johnson and Recorder Biede affix their signatures. Then it will be watch your step all the time or get ready to say "good morning Judge."

Chief of Police McNabb is having a big bunch of fags printed, and Judge Frost is clearing off the top of his desk, in preparation for a busy season. But lets fool those boys. Lets not get caught.

All we will have to do is park on a side street, or, if we must park on Main street, move our cars within the hour time limit.

The idea of making drivers keep their lights on while parked on dark streets, is a good idea, I believe, and will do a lot to prevent accidents.

Now, if we can only get bicycle riders to use lights when traveling around at night, we will be pretty safe.

Sincerely yours,
Auntie Ashland.

Mr. R. W. Price,
Lessee, Lithia Springs hotel,
Dear Dick:

[Whew, some party! Just the right sort of thing to top off Ashland's enthusiasm over her new hotel. And the way you and your staff handled the guests was a wonder. Even when many, many more arrived on the scene than were anticipated, you met the emergency wonderfully.

And the program was just long enough to be interesting, and not long enough to be boring. In short, Dick, it was perfect. Too bad we can't have a couple more openings, but I guess one is all that is allotted to one hotel.

Sincerely,
Auntie Ashland.

Mrs. Grace E. Andrews,
Instructor, Week Day Religious School,
Dear Mrs. Andrews:

I hope you have a lot of success with your week day school of religion, for I believe it will do a great deal of good. Of course, there are many parents who do not desire to have their children attend the school, and it is their privilege to feel that way. In fact, little good would come from your efforts if those children were forced to attend the school.

But there are others, willing and anxious to attend the school. These will gain much from your teachings. I wish you a lot of success.

Sincerely yours,
Auntie Ashland.

Mr. Clinton Baughman,
Chief, Fire Department,
Ashland, Oregon,
Dear Chief:

October 5 to 12 is to be Fire Prevention Week, and I hope that you are getting ready to stage a drive to cut down the fire hazards in this city. Now to it think, we are all back of you in this work.

Although Ashland has only suffered a $616 fire loss so far this year, we can always be on the lookout for possible fires, and take measures to prevent them. As the old gag goes, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. We might change it a little by saying an ounce of removal is worth a ton of burn. In other words, it will be better to do a little toward removing the hazards rather than have them burn and endanger surrounding buildings.

Winter, the big season of fires, will be with us soon, and we want to have everything ship shape before that season arrives.

I hope you have a lot of success in your campaign, for it is a good one, and very little work will save the people of Ashland a lot of money and worry if they will listen and follow your instructions.

Sincerely yours,
Auntie Ashland.

Of Ashland Daily Tidings, published each afternoon except Sunday, at Ashland, Ore., for October 1, 1923. STATE OF OREGON)

COUNTY OF JACKSON)

Before me, a Notary in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared G. M. Green, who, having been duly sworn according to law, depose and say that he is the Business Manager of the Ashland Daily Tidings, and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management and circulation for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 443, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to-wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are: Editor, Bert R. Greer, Ashland, Ore.; Managing Editor, G. M. Green, Ashland, Ore.; Business Manager, G. M. Green, Ashland, Ore.

2. That the owner is: (If the publication is owned by an individual his name and address, or if owned by more than one individual the name and address of each, should be given below; if the publication is owned by a corporation the name of the corporation and the names and addresses of the stockholders owning or holding one per cent or more of the total amount of stock should be given.) Bert R. Greer, Ashland, Ore.; Lithia Springs Hotel, Ashland, Ore.; George W. Coffey, Ashland, Ore.

3. That the known bondholders, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as a trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the publication is owned by a corporation the name of the corporation and the names and addresses of the stockholders owning or holding one per cent or more of the total amount of stock should be given in the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

5. That the average number of copies of each issue of this publication sold or distributed, through the mails or otherwise, to paid subscribers during the six months preceding the date shown above is 1785. (This information is required from daily publications only.)

Demand

IN the early days of the telephone, when the 16-mile circuit from Boston to Salem was the longest in existence, an old lady visited the Boston exchange and asked for a connection to Chicago so she could talk with her son.

The need for voicing thought to far-away places began with the nation's expanding activities. Long before the telephone art permitted it, long distance service was demanded. A national service was, from the beginning, the bescon of the telephone's founders, and the inspiration of the scientists and engineers whose achievements gradually overcame the obstacles to the transmission of human speech.

These conquered, national expansion has more and more been made possible, and the uncertainties of separation have diminished. Today any community in America can talk with any other so promptly and satisfactorily that men have difficulty in imagining a time when universal service was an ideal yet to be reached.
