STOCKMEN IN PROTEST OVER IMPOUNDING

Appear Before Council With Demands For Protection

IMPOUNDING UPHOLD

Effort Will be Made to Cooperate by City, But Action of Employees Lauded

A group of local stockmen, among whom were D. M. Lowe and George Mathis, appeared before the city council last night, protesting the action of the chief of police and the superintendent of the water department in impounding their cattle, found in the Ashland creek watershed, and threatening court action unless a satisfactory arrangement can be made, whereby their cattle will be protected.

"There will be friction, unpleasant friction, unless the stockmen and the council can get together on this matter," declared Lowe. "The stockmen have erected a drift fence at the head of the canyon, but this fence is knocked down by hunters and sheepmen who cross the head of the canyon, over Cinnabar trail," he continued.

Lowe made the suggestion that this fence be removed and again set up across the head of the canyon from Mt. Wagner to Mt. Ashland, thus taking it off the trail, and making it unnecessary for hunters, sheepmen and stockmen to cross. The matter was taken under advisement and the water committee of the council will confer with the stockmen. However, the action of the city employees in impounding the cattle found in the watershed was upheld and commended.

C. A. Malone, superintendent of the electric department, will be appointed purchasing agent, the city attorney being ordered to draw up a resolution creating this office. The application for such an office was made by Malone, Earl Hosler, superintendent of the water department, and Frank Merrill, superintendent of the street department.

The electric department was authorized to purchase 1700 pounds of copper wire, at a total cost of $331.50, to be used in adding refinements to the city electric system.

WALTER JOHNSON MOWS DOWN PITTSBURGH TO WIN 4 TO 1

Joe Harris and Pie Traynor Hit Home Runs in Opening Game of Season's Classic. But Five Hits Are Gathered Off Johnson's Magnificent Delivery. Meadows Hurls Good Ball For Pittsburgh, But Has Bad Inning in Fifth, When Washington Scores Two Runs, to Tie up Game.

FORBES FIELD, PITTSBURGH, Oct. 7.—(U. P.)—Walter Johnson, "Old Barney," beloved veteran of the Washington Senators, came into his own here this afternoon, when, before a capacity crowd of more than 45,000 people, he turned back the Pittsburgh Pirates in their first assault upon the world's champions, in the 1925 blue ribbon classic of baseball, the worlds series.

Johnson, with his fast ball smokindang hopping, mowed down the heavy hitting Pirates in every inning except the fifth, when Pie Traynor got a toe hold and dumped one out of the lot for a circuit swat, the only run scored off the venerable veteran.

But five hits were registered against Johnson, and these were kept well scattered, no two coming in the same inning. Lee Meadows, be-spectacled Pittsburgh ace, opposed Johnson on the mound.

His sweeping curve kept the Senators breaking their backs throughout the game, with the exception of the fifth inning, when they got to him for four hits and two runs, and the ninth, when two more hits resulted in a run.

Both hurlers had almost perfect control, not a base on balls, being issued by either man. However, Carey was hit twice by Johnson.

Both outfits went out in order in the first inning. However, in the second, after Goslin had been disposed of, Joe Harris pumped one of Meadows' curves into the bleachers. Harris believed his hit to be a two base knock, according to the ground rules, but he was waved on in, and the umpires ruled balls hit into the bleachers were home runs.

With perfect support, the two teams went down the line until the fifth, when three successive singles filled the bases for Washington. Meadows settled down and struck out Ruel and Johnson, but Rice singled into center, scoring two runs.

Traynor's homer in the fifth accounted for his teams lone tally. In the ninth, Goslin's single, Judge's sacrifice, and a single by Bluege accounted for an unnecessary run.

HAROLD TRAYNOR
"Pie" Traynor, Pittsburgh third baseman, who scored his team's lone tally, when he caught one of Johnson's fast ones in the fifth inning and parked it in the bleachers for a home run.

Through the courtesy of J. M. Bowers, The Tidings was able to receive the World's Series reports, play by play, over a super Zenith radio set. Domino Provoost is local dealer for the Zenith radio.

A play by play account of the series follows.

Second Inning—Pittsburgh—Moore struck out; Carey was hit by a pitched ball; Cuyler struck out; Barnhard struck out. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Third Inning—Washington—Judge flied out to Carey; Joe Harris hit a home run into the right field bleachers. The outfield umpire at first ruled it a two base hit, but the chief umpire ruled balls hit into the temporary bleachers were home runs. Bluege went out, Moore to Grantham; Peck struck out. One run, one hit, no errors.

Seventh Inning—Washington—Harris hit by pitched ball; Grantham took Goslin's liner and doubled Harris at first; Judge went out, Moore to Grantham. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Eighth Inning—Pittsburgh—Carey struck out on three pitched balls; Cuyler singled over second, the second hit off Johnson. Cuyler was run down between first and second; Barnhart fanned. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Tenth Inning—Pittsburgh—Traynor hit a home run into the right field stands; Wright struck out; Peck took Grantham's grounder and threw wildly to first, Grantham stopped at first; Smith flied out to Joe Harris; Grantham stole second; Meadows struck out. One run, one hit, one error.

Eleventh Inning—Washington—Bluege went out on strikes; Peck went out Traynor to Grantham. No runs, no hits, no errors.
