Mr. R. E. Detrick, Member, City Council, Dear R. E.: I am certainly glad to see that you have taken a firm hand in the dealings of the council in connection with the watershed question.

Although it is to be hoped that some arrangements can be made with the stockmen, whereby it will be possible for the city and those men to work amicably in keeping cattle out of the watershed.

Although most of the stock men are like D. M. Lowe, endeavoring to help in every way when their stock drifts into the canyon, there are, as is the case everywhere a few who will try to step over the bounds.

It is possible to do so at a reasonable expense, I would recommend that the city cooperate with the cattlemen in replacing that drift fence at the head of the canyon. Then much of the friction will be removed, and a friendly settlement may be reached.

However, I am in favor of your idea, keep the cattle out of the canyon, at all costs, until such a settlement is reached.

Sincerely yours, Auntie Ashland.

Mr. Clinton Baughman, Chief, Fire Department, Dear Clint:

Now that you have set the facts of the case plainly before the public I am certain that they are for you, and for the strengthening of the fire department. They realize that the department is under-equipped and under-manned, and that help must be forthcoming at once.

Usually, however, it takes a tragedy of some sort to jar the people out of their lethargy. A fire destroying much valuable property would probably result in the voting of bonds for new equipment right now. But that method would be too expensive. I believe your campaign has been equally effective and much cheaper.

I believe if you would prepare a statement of exactly what the fire department needs to put it in first class condition, and present it to the city council, it would receive their hearty support, for you know Clint, they are all strong for you, but have never been definitely told, in an open meeting, of your needs.

Try it, anyway. If you are turned down, we can't blame you for trying, and that's all any man can do. Sincerely yours, Auntie Ashland.

Mr. J. H. McGee, Ashland, Oregon, Dear Jim:

Glad to see you in your new building, prospering and having an increased business. You deserve it, for any time a man spends fifteen years in the Ladies' wear business, he is long suffering enough to be successor to Job.

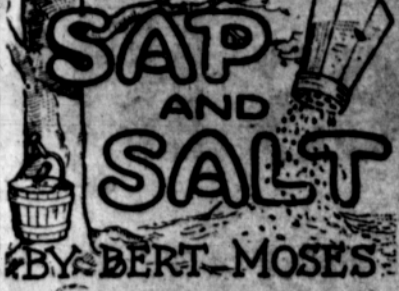

But I wish you all the success in the work Jim for your ability has created your business. And your new building should be an aid in pushing you on to even greater things. Yours truly, Auntie Ashland.

Rev. S. J. Chaney, Pastor, Methodist Church, Friend Sam: We of Ashland are certainly sorry to lose you Sam, but we are all glad to see you promoted to a finer position.

You will find Eugene a fine city in which to live, with her hospitable people, and her up and going business. They will make you feel at home at once, and will have a splendid welcome ready for you. We will welcome Rev. Pemberton, your successor as a man worthy of replacing you for we hear he is a wonderful minister. Other Southern Oregon cities wanted him, but the Methodist conference must have felt they should repay us for giving you up Sam, by sending us another fine man.

- Good Luck - Auntie Ashland.

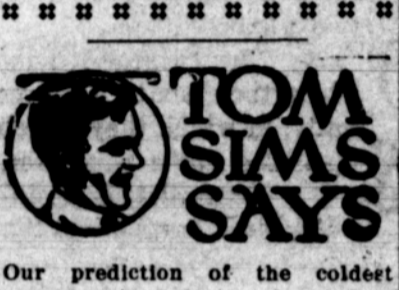

Those who are able to hold jobs rarely have to look for one. It doesn't cost much to get into trouble, but it costs a lot to get out.

Honesty is that quality that takes advantage of a legal loophole to avoid taxes. The reason the straight way is so narrow is because the travel on it is so light.

As a rule, a woman would rather be a little ashamed than altogether out of style. No man should go into the undertaking business until he has reduced patience to a science.

Hex Heck says: "Doin' your own plumbin' supplies more experience to the gallon than any other thing I know of."

Our prediction of the coldest winter ever is based on the fact that all winters are that cold. It takes a pair of dreamy eyes to keep a man awake.

Some men tell their wives everything that happens, and some even tell them some things that don't happen. A man is a person who gets mad when the barber doesn't guess how he wanted his hair cut.

Perhaps a third of our cuss words were invented by men while wishing it was payday. If you only knew it, the man at the bottom of a lot of things spends most of his life up a tree.

Great Mothers of the World

ANNE NEAL, Mother of Mr. Grover Cleveland

By MARY GREER CONKLIN. President Cleveland acquired the given name of Grover from the revered, elderly man who had preceded his father as pastor of the Presbyterian church at Caldwell, New Jersey, serving almost half a century, and whose name was greatly beloved in that community. A country clergyman's life in those days meant constant sacrifice, but Anne Neal's love for her husband stood the test of time, of changing conditions and an always scanty income.

When there was being launched a movement to nominate him for the presidency, Mr. Cleveland received news of his mother's illness and departed from New York at once.

"During those last sad days of waiting," wrote one who spent time with him, "no one would have supposed that any political ambitions were in his mind. Never once during the last two weeks of her illness did he leave his home town; and when the many letters and telegrams arrived, he answered them with no apparent concern, so that even the family group were not aware of the possibilities that lay so definitely before him."

Thus, like Abraham Lincoln, Grover Cleveland turned for strength to his mother's prayers as he tentatively faced the great responsibilities which must be borne by a President of the United States; and back of her son's pronouncement while he was president, "It is not the mere slothful acceptance of righteous political ideas, but the call to action for their enforcement and application, that tests the endurance and moral courage of men," we see the reflection of this devout and courageous mother.
