A SURE GUIDE:—Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in Him; and he shall bring it to pass.
Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him. Psalm 37:5, 7.
PRAYER:—O Lord, we come to Thee for Thou art the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

WAITING ON "GEORGE"

This is a fairly good community, as communities go. Even without being boastful, it is possible for any citizen to point with pride to his home.

But there is one fly in the ointment that prevents Ashland from advancing as rapidly as it should.

Everyone is willing and actually wants to have things done, but always waits for "George," that mythical "good fellow," to do it. But when George reaches a certain point, he balks because he tires of carrying the whole load.

The thing needed most of all is a great spirit of working together which entirely eliminates prejudices and selfishness—a willingness on the part of each one to do his or her share in the advancement of our community interests.

In every community there are always a few, in every enterprise, who are willing to work for the public good. They are the "Georges."

Once in awhile we read of some place that keeps booming and shoving right along regardless of conditions or handicaps.

Such a place is full of "Georges," and because they are so numerous, none of them is overworked and there is no occasion for balking.

Why can't we all be "Georges?"
There is plenty of room for improvement and plenty of people with the time, energy and money to be "Georges."

OUR AIR POLICY

Naval air pilots insisted in testimony given before the president's aircraft investigation board, that the United States would make no progress in aircraft until a separate department is created and is controlled by practical airmen.

This has been the complaint for years against the war and navy departments—that civilians appointed for political reasons and given power to control the military and naval branches of the government, could not be expected to produce the best results.

If an aircraft department is brought into being and an experienced airman given authority, it would be a radical change in policy by the government, and manifestly a similar policy would have to be followed in the army and navy sections of the national defense.

Placing trained men in authority will not settle the controversy that is constantly arising over our military, naval and air policies.

The investigation, however, will tend to clarify the situation and may be of some value. It has at least developed one fact, namely, that both the army and navy did not receive the amount of money asked for when their appropriations were before congress. This resulted in curtailment of the naval air program.

Regardless of who may head any or all of the national defense departments, nothing constructive can be accomplished without the full co-operation of congress.

SHORT CUTS

This is an age of short cuts to everything. No one seems to have time for the "meat" of anything.

The hair is cut short, the dresses are cut short and the sleeves are cut short.

We want our sermons short and we insist on our public speakers making it short and "snappy."

Synthetic foods, substitutes for the real thing, abound, and corn beef and cabbage exist only as a comic page myth.

Everybody is looking for a short cut to wealth without work. Robbing a bank seems to be the most favored of short cuts in this class.

Motorists are constantly demanding short cuts and highway commissions are straightening highways to make greater speed possible.

Short cuts to health are sought in sanitariums after health has been lost by burning the candle at both ends.

But the world's work is not going to be done with short cuts. Those of us who are engulfed in the "short cut" mania will have to learn that patience, time and hard work are just as much requirements of accomplishments as they ever were.

Arthur Brisbane says Ford all-metal airplanes will carry a pilot and 1,000 pounds of fast freight. Fast, to say the least.

SAP AND SALT
BY BERT MOSES

Good advice is nearly always hard to take.

Flies and lovers flock together at the soda fountain.

A man in the wrong is generally so pig-headed that he stays there.

It is often the case that the under dog deserves to be right where he is.

To sweat on a golf course is aristocratic; to sweat in a cornfield is low and vulgar.

The trouble with experience is that sometimes you get more of it than you know what to do with.

Hez Heck says: "So far nothing equals the hornet for supplying the most experience in the least time."

country of opportunity; that success and happiness come to a man, not because of what is round him, family, fashion and fortune, but because of sturdy qualities in him; not for what he has but for what he is.

The portrait of Victoria Josephine Moor, frontpiece to the first biography of Mr. Calvin Coolidge, shows a slender face, serenely classic, crowned by a broad and noble brow. The memory of her who died when he was twelve, "who alighted to better worlds," was the inspiration of that part of Mr. Coolidge's Lincoln Day Proclamation; "About his (Lincoln's) cradle all was poor and mean save only the source of all great men, the love of a wonderful woman.

When she faded away in his tender years, from her deathbed in humble poverty she endowed her son with greatness. There can be no proper observance of a birthday which forgets the mother."

In many respects Mr. Calvin Coolidge suggests Abraham Lincoln. Like Lincoln he was of humble birth; like Lincoln his own mother died in his boyhood; like Lincoln he was devoted to his step-mother while he revered his mother's memory; like Lincoln he was born with an instinctive sense of right; like Lincoln, in the first hours of his Presidency, as he contemplated the overpowering responsibilities that lay before him, Mr. Coolidge turned to his mother, halting his progress to Washington to stand alone at her grave. Lincoln it was who said: "Let reverence of the law be breathed by every mother to the hisping babe that prattles on her lap; let it be taught in schools, seminaries and colleges; let it be written in primers, spelling books and almanacs; let it be preached from pulpits and proclaimed in legislative halls and enforced in courts of justice; let it become the political religion of the nation." And it became the duty of President Coolidge actually to make law enforcement a political religion in order that the republic which Lincoln held together during the Civil War would not become disintegrated by another spectre as revolting as slavery. He was the first president to put to work on a literal basis that clause in the Constitution of the United States; "He (the President) shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed," by himself admonishing the Attorney General of the United States what to do to bring about this necessary adjunct of good government—the enforcement of all laws, not merely the prohibition laws, but laws of every sort and description.

How much of Mr. Coolidge's uncompromising inflexibility in promoting law enforcement came from heredity, from a resolute mother and an equally determined father; how much from his religious and moral environment?
