STEWART'S WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES F. STEWART NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — Samuel M. Rabston's death strengthens President Coolidge's hand in the upper house of Congress.

The late Indiana Democratic senator's seat is sure to be filled, temporarily, through gubernatorial appointment, by a Republican.

An election will have to determine the choice of Senator Rabston's permanent successor, and Indiana is doubtful.

Still, the administration's political meteorologists predict "Republican weather" for some time to come and are quite hopeful concerning the next Hoosier senatorial test at the polls.

The upper house is so close that even one vote counts.

The point is raised in the Washington Press—not yet in court, but that may come if the case looks good enough—that the District of Columbia is legally wet, despite the Volstead act, or else that it isn't the District of Columbia, but part of Maryland.

One J. A. I. Self was first to dig up the facts, if they are facts. Leading wets are studying them, to determine what they're worth. The dregs, not perurbed, nevertheless are left which gives the amendment force. Or, if not, Self argues, the agreement has been broken by the government and the district, Washington and all, reverts to Maryland.
